NOTHING TO SMILE ABOUT As economic pain deepens and faith in leadership falters, Kenya is staring at a crisis of confidence — not just in its government, but in its very future. A nationwide survey by Tifa, conducted between May 2 and 6, reveals widespread disillusionment. From the soaring cost of living to entrenched corruption and what many term failed leadership, Kenyans say life has grown markedly worse since 2022.

Ruto lands in Nyanza today with fresh bag of goodies in his fifth tour

President William Ruto is today expected to Nyanza with a fresh bag of goodies as he steps up his efforts to pacify the region and entrench the support of ODM leader Raila Odinga.

The President is expected to be in the region for four days to launch and inspect development projects ahead of the Madaraka Day celebrations in Homa Bay on Sunday.

The visit is among several that the Head of State has made in the region in the last one year as he bids to build on the goodwill brought by the "handshake" with Raila.

Yesterday, several government officials were running against the clock to ensure that the projects are ready for inspection.

Today, Ruto is expected to unveil the recently completed affordable housing project implemented by Lap-Fund in Kisumu. A few metres away from where the 1,300 units stands, his own legacy housing project is also at an advanced stage.

In Homa Bay, Interior PS Raymond Omollo and the Chief of Defense Forces Charles Kahariri led the National Celebrations Steering Committee in inspecting the Raila Odinga Stadium where the event will take place.

The President's tour of Migori is, however, in doubts after it was omitted in the State House itinerary (See separate story).

Yesterday, Ruto's allies led by Mining and Blue Economy Cabinet Secretary Hassan Joho pitched tent in Homa Bay, where he handed fishermen assorted fishing gear and opened the Achich Beach Management Unit offices in Homa Bay East.

"We are inviting everyone to come and join us in marking Madaraka Day celebrations. The President will be here and I am urging everyone to come out in their numbers and welcome him," said Governor Gladys Wanga.

Ruto is expected to launch the Dhiwa-Gor Mahia Ring Road and a last-mile electricity project. He will also lay foundation for a technical training institute in Ndhiwa Sub-County.

On Friday, President Ruto will be at a meeting on blue economy at the Tom Mboya University and commission a building before launching Kenya Shipyard Limited and the university's maritime centre.

He will also later visit Pier KPA and fish market at the Rangwe Sub-County headquarters and inspect roads.

On Saturday, President Ruto will hold a leaders' meeting at the Homa Bay State Lodge.

His visit will end on Sunday after the Madaraka Day celebrations whose theme is "Blue Economy and Maritime Affairs".

Preparations for the national celebrations are nearing completion, with the stadium getting a major upgrade.

The improvements include the construction of public terraces, pavilion rehabilitated, parking areas and the extension of the perimeter wall.

Additionally, the celebrations will also see the improvement of over 35 kilometres of roads by the Kenya National Highways Authority, Kenya Rural Roads Authority and Kenya Urban Roads Authority.

The President's tour comes at a time campaigns for two parliamentary seats in the region are heating up ahead of expected by-elections.

So intense are the grassroots mobilizations in Kasipul and Unguja constituencies that some politicians are already campaigning.

Politicians are not leaving anything to chance especially in their bid to capture the ODM ticket, which almost guarantees one victory in the region.

The battle is likely to see top party leaders clash as they push to have their preferred aspirants endorsed.

The campaign is also likely to test the depth of the Raila, Ruto unity in the region, as some Kenya Kwanza allies may also push for their own. [Anne tieno and Harold Odhiambo]

Supremacy wars force President to skip Migori

► Elected leaders threatened to boycott, accusing Governor Ayacko of sidelining them.

► President Ruto is seeking to consolidate ODM leader Raila Odinga's voting bloc.

BRIAN OTIENO, NAIROBI

President William Ruto returns to Nyanza today for a four-day tour of the region amid wrangles that have forced a change of plans.

Former Prime Minister Raila Odinga is expected to join Dr Ruto in the tour that preludes Sunday's Madaraka Day celebration in Homa Bay County.

Ruto was initially meant to start his tour in Migori, a county he visited three weeks ago, before heading to Homa Bay and Kisumu.

Yesterday, The Standard established that wrangles between the county's leadership and other elected leaders saw the Migori tour shelved. The county announced that the visit was "postponed to a future date due to engagements and functions that will happen in Kisumu on the same day."

However, sources said supremacy battles led to the tour's cancellation. On Tuesday, National Assembly Minority Leader Junet Mohamed convened a meeting attended by a section of lawmakers from the county in Nairobi, with the MPs threatening to boycott the Migori tour on claims they were sidelined, forcing the State House to cancel it.

A lawmaker who sought anonymity accused Governor Ochillo Ayacko of trying to isolate other leaders in planning the tour.

"We resolved to boycott the tour because the Governor did not involve anyone else in planning the tour, which was to happen in our constituencies," said the MP who attended Tuesday's meeting.

Junet did not respond to our inquiry for comment on why the tour was cancelled. Similarly, we could not reach Ayacko for comment.

In his last visit barely two months ago, Ruto was subjected to ridicule after a shoe was hurled at him as he addressed a crowd in Kuria.

Ayacko met Ruto last week without some of the county's leaders, which rattled those who missed out. He had requested the meeting that should have included all elected politicians from Migori, one that the Members of the County Assembly had requested when Ruto visited the county earlier this month.

In the current tour of Nyanza, the fifth since 2022, Ruto is also not scheduled to visit Siaya. The Governor James Orengo-led county has had its share of wrangles, too.

Orengo has mostly been left isolated over his opposition to Ruto, and his requests to meet the Head of State snubbed. The county boss had written to Ruto to request a meeting with a delegation from Siaya.

Frustrated, the county's elected politicians have sought to engage the President through Energy Cabinet Secretary Opiyo Wandayi, who recently met MPs to plan a meeting.

Ruto hopes to inherit the Nyanza backyard from Raila. In the 2022 election, the four counties of Siaya, Kisumu, Homa Bay and Migori produced 1.56 million votes, with Raila securing 95 per cent of the vote.

Such numbers are enticing to the President, who is perceived to be losing ground in the Mt Kenya region. Indeed, Ruto has sought to diversify his basket and ventured out to other regions.

With Raila's blessings, Ruto is seeking to replicate the former premier's success in Nyanza in spite of the unending wrangles in the bloc's counties as well as resistance from some of its politicians.

"The wrangles are a storm in a teacup," says Dr Timothy Onduru of the Moi University. "They will not affect Ruto's chances as Raila still has solid support in Luoland. Whatever he tells the people, they will do."

Wrangles among elected politicians have often been perceived as insignificant in determining how regions vote for presidential candidates. However, there have been concerns that leaving the fights unresolved may eventually affect voter turnout.

We resolved to boycott the tour because the Governor did not involve anyone else in planning the tour, which was to happen in our constituencies,"

MP from Migori County.

Motorist loses ambulance crash case, ordered to pay Sh778,000

- ▶ Court rules ambulance had right of way during emergency response.
- ▶ Motorist claimed ambulance driver failed to maintain safe distance.

KAMAU MUTHONI, NAIROBI

A motorist's quest to seek compensation from a hospital following an ambulance accident has flopped twice. Maurice Otieno Owiti sued Eagle Health and Clinic, seeking compensation over a collision involving the hospital's ambulance on June 5, 2023. Otieno said he was driving along the Nairobi Expressway when the ambulance allegedly hit his vehicle. He asked the court to award special damages, loss of user, costs of the suit and interest. However, the Small Claims Court ruled against him, finding that he should have given way to the ambulance, which had its siren on and hazard lights flashing to indicate an emergency. The court held him 100 per cent liable for the accident and ordered him to pay the hospital Sh778,769. Dissatisfied with the ruling, Otieno appealed to the High Court. Before Justice Teresiah Ouya, he argued that the lower court had erred in finding him solely liable. He also faulted the adjudicator for finding that he purposely refused to make way for the ambulance and shifting the burden of explaining that he was not reckless on him. Otieno insisted that the ambulance driver was liable for the accident. He said that the emergency vehicle failed to maintain a safe distance as required by the traffic law. He stated that the lower court erred when it concluded that he changed lanes and suddenly joined the lane occupied by the ambulance without indicating. Otieno was armed with a photograph to show that the ambulance rammed on his vehicle's middle section. He argued that this was inconsisent with the court's finding that his car hit the ambulance. In its response, Eagle Health argued that the lower court was right to find that Otieno was at fault. It asserted that his case was defective as the appeal from a Small Claims Court ought to be on 'matters of law' only. In her judgment, Justice Ouya said that the contention between the two was whether an ambulance is exempt from observing traffic rules and if it is not bound to keep safe distance from other motorists. According to the judge, the lower court was right, as it weighed the evidence from both sides and anchored it on law. imuthoni@standardmedia.co.ke

Briefing NAIVASHA. MASINGA DAM EXCEEDS LIMIT

■ The water level at Masinga Dam has risen to 1,056.97 metres above sea level, surpassing its maximum capacity. Kenya Electricity Generating Company (KenGen) says it has activated real-time monitoring systems across its dams to manage risks and optimise water use. Chief Executive Peter Njenga said all power stations remain stable despite high water levels, adding that Masinga's resilience offers hope for hydroelectric power amid climate change and erratic rainfall patterns. ## NAKURU. DIALOGUE CALL IN HOSPITAL LAND ROW

■ The Environment and Land Court in Nyahururu has called for dialogue to end the impasse over the reopening of War Memorial Hospital, which was closed a year ago. Judge Joseph Mugo stated the matter could be resolved amicably. The private management of the hospital and the county government have been in conflict over the ownership of the prime land since October 2023. The Judge urged both parties to mind the welfare of the patients. [Daniel Chege]

What they said about state of the economy?

Angelah Isili, Eldoret

The issue of the economic situation in the country is a big problem, which has fuelled insecurity across the country. Our President should intervene urgently and make policies that lower cost of basic items.

Isaac Siya, Eldoret

The government should work with speed to solve the hard economic situation. Business has gone down and some of my customers have relocated. The national and county governments must improve the business environment.

Lindaline Muhonja, Migori County

The economy is bad. We wake up very early to look for money and we end up getting nothing. The price of cooking oil has shot up. I end up not getting any profit when I cook chapati and mandazi. The price of wheat flour is also high. I wonder where this government is taking us.

Tobias Omollo, Migori

The matatu business is not doing well because of hiked fuel prices. I plead with the government to reduce fuel prices. The high fuel prices are hurting most businesses across the country. The government has hiked everything in the matatu sector including insurance.

Caroline Wanjiru, Mombasa

Life is moderate and I urge other Kenyans to work harder since the government has neglected price control on basics and necessities like food, education and health. If the Kenya Kwanza government sorts the mess in healthcare, we will all benefit.

Bosman Bosco, Mombasa

Life is hard since money is not circulating. Rising prices in cars has affected my business. I am not getting new customers compared to previous years. The government should strive to lower trading levies and accommodate small traders eking out a living.

Poll: Kenyans worse off since Ruto took over

► New survey shows most Kenyans are poorer since Kenya Kwanza government came into power.

► Many also feel the country is heading in the wrong direction, TIFA poll shows.

NDUNGU GACHANE, NAIROBI

Majority of Kenyans are facing harsh economic conditions, a new opinion survey indicates.

The latest poll by the Trends and Insights for Africa (TIFA) has laid bare the suffering Kenyans are going through since President William Ruto took over power two and half years ago.

The poll found that majority of Kenyans feel the country is headed in the wrong direction. The poll, released yesterday, shows that 75 per cent of Kenyans who were asked to compare their current economic situation with what it was three years ago, days before the presidential election, said that their way of life had become worse, with only 10 per cent characterising it as better while 13 per cent indicated that it had remained the same.

Among the majority who reported that their way of life had changed to worse, Lower Eastern and Nyanza were the majority standing at 82 per cent followed by Nairobi and Mt Kenya at 79 per cent. In what reflected the voting patterns in the 2022 elections the lowest negative figures came from Central Rift and Northern Kenya (61 per cent and 63 per cent, respectively).

"At the same time, in none of the nine zones do even one-fifth of respondents say that their economic state has improved since 2022, the highest proportions being in Central Rift and Northern zones (19 per cent in both)." The survey read in part.

As a result of personal and family economic situations, 86 per cent of Kenyans felt the country was headed in the wrong direction. However, 38 per cent of Kenyans who have suffered economically still felt the country was in the right direction.

The report said 36 per cent of Kenyans who reported that the country was in the right direction had reported economic improvement.

While the survey suggested that President Ruto was given credit for continuation and launch of infrastructure projects, 46 per cent of Kenyans could not name any such achievements.

Eighteen per cent said Ruto had failed to reduce the cost of living, while 11 per cent of those interviewed claimed Ruto had failed to produce leadership for the country.

However, 14 per cent of people interviewed believe Ruto had achieved in infrastructure development, five per cent said the Kenya Kwanza administration had achieved at reducing and stabilising the cost of living and 4 per cent said

KENYA'S DIRECTION

- 75 % say country headed wrong direction
- 14 % say country headed right direction
- 9% are not sure whether right or wrong

Main Reason for 'Right' vs. 'Wrong'

Wrong direction

- 45 % cite high cost of living
- 11% cite poor/ failed leadership
- 10% cite unemployment

Right direction

- 27% say Cost of Living has been managed
- 11% cite improved infrastructure.
- 8% cite effective/strong leadership

Change in Personal/Family Economic Situation

- 75 % say situation got worse
- 10% say situation got better

Ruto's failures

- 18% cite failure to reduce the cost of living
- 11% cite leadership
- 8% cite poor health services
- 7% cite human rights abuses

TIFA research analyst Dr Tom Wolf releases the report in Nairobi. [Elvis Ogina, Standard]

the government had achieved growth in Agriculture.

Corruption, poor leadership, tribalism and ethnic tensions and inflation, cost of living were among the key factors perceived to be undermining Kenya's development.

According to the poll, majority of Kenyans: 42 per cent believe corruption was among the main factors impeding development, while poor leadership followed at 30 per cent and those who perceived that ethnicity was a barrier to development stood at 6 per cent.

Although President Ruto's key objective of bringing ODM leader Raila Odinga onboard was to unify the country and to stabilise it, the survey by TIFA pointed out that based on their economic status, 54 per cent of Kenyans were against the broad based government.

Only 22 per cent of Kenyans supported the broad based government, with majority of those who supported the Ruto Raila pact hailing from the president's Rift backyard.

"Across the country, support for the Broad Based Government is highest in the President's home zone of Central Rift (37%) and lowest in the Mt. Kenya and Lower Eastern zones are the home areas of his former Deputy President Rigathi Gachagua and Wiper leader Kalonzo Musyoka, respectively (13 per cent and 12 per cent)," the survey says.

In Gachagua and Kalonzo's backyards, Kenyans were opposed to the broad-based government with 58 per cent of Kenyans in Mt Kenya opposing the arrangement and 72 per cent from Lower Eastern.

In Nyanza, 49 per cent were anti the broad-based government, 25 per cent supported it and 26 per cent had no opinion while in Coast, 57 per cent were opposed to the arrangement, 22 supported it and 21 had no opinion.

The broad based arrangement was also not popular in Nairobi where 57 per cent were opposed, 21 supported and 22 had no opinion. In Western, 50 per cent were opposed, 21 per cent supported and 29 per cent either had no opinion or did not respond.

"Based on such economic and 'direction' findings, it is not surprising, therefore, that fewer than one quarter of Kenyans express support for the BBG. Though given the evidently continuing influence of its major figures (Ruto and Raila), neither is it surprising that (along with Northern), Kenyans in their home areas (Central Rift and Nyanza) give it the highest level of such support," the report read.

According to the survey some of the reasons why the broad base government was not supported was as a result of Raila failing to bring his entire ODM 'entourage' along with him in supporting the BBG arrangement.

At the same time, 31 per cent of those who are anti broad based arrangement feel that Raila should rejoin Opposition and contest for presidency while 22 per cent hope that he will rejoin the opposition and support another candidate against Ruto.

However, 38 per cent of the broad based supporters feel Raila should support Ruto's re-election while 25 of the broad based backers feel he should contest for presidency.

Sorry if we wronged you, Ruto tells Gen Z amid calls to reconcile

► President expresses confidence the country is headed in right direction, citing 'broad-based' government.

► Opposition dismisses Ruto's apology as insincere and demand justice for those killed and tortured.

IRENE GITHINJI, NAIROBI

From quoting Bible verses to singing, praying, and praising God, the country's top leadership gathered for a breakfast, breaking away from their usual political noise.

For a few hours yesterday, Kenyans were spared heavy political rhetoric as the leaders united under the theme "Rise and Rebuild" during the 22nd National Prayer Breakfast in Nairobi.

President William Ruto's speech centered on reconciliation. He apologised, albeit with an "if", to the Gen Z and neighbouring countries.

"To our friends from Tanzania, if we have wronged you in any way, forgive us. To our friends from Uganda, if Kenyans have done anything wrong, we apologise. To our children, if there has been any misstep, we apologise. To our neighbours, if we have erred, we want to build relationships that will make our country great and move us forward. Today, God has made it possible for us to bridge divides between our political parties," he said.

His remarks followed a message of reconciliation from former American football professional and renowned motivational speaker Rickey Allen Bolden.

Bolden noted that the young people, some who have gone to college, bought homes and married, were crying out for the right to be treated as adults and respected.

"I don't care how many building projects we undertake; if we do not rebuild relationships, trust, love, and respect, we've achieved little. What about saying, 'How do I build a bridge?' What about the neighbour you don't like? What about your Gen Z? How do you build that bridge?" he said.

Gen Z's frustration

"Last year, when my brother Earl and I returned home from the prayer breakfast, we saw Gen Z's frustration. Earl asked, 'Rick, what's the problem?' I said, 'Gen Z is dying to be loved, to have a seat at the table, to be respected.' Some of our Gen Zs are smarter than we are."

He urged the leaders acknowledge the violence meted on protesters. "Wouldn't it be beautiful if leaders stood up and said, 'We had you arrested, and we know that was traumatising. We're sorry?' Or, 'We shut down the internet, your primary source of communication, and we're sorry. Now we want to bring you to the table so you can have a voice, because you're no longer children—you're adults.'"

Last year, a Gen Z-led uprising nearly brought the country to a standstill, forcing Ruto to set aside the Finance Bill, 2024, and sack his Cabinet. The government's forceful response resulted in about 60 deaths and 32 abductions, with some of those kidnapped yet to be accounted for.

The President's remarks also came against the backdrop of tensions between Kenya and Tanzania over the recent torture and deportation to Kenyans, who had gone to attend the hearing of a court case involving opposition leader Tundu Lissu.

"We must be careful to thank God for the blessing of a great country and the strides we are making together. As we rebuild relationships among ourselves, with our sons and daughters, our children, our neighbouring countries, and beyond, we must always be grateful for what God has done for us as a nation," said Ruto.

Notably absent from the breakfast tables were opposition politicians such as Wiper's Kalonzo Musyoka and Eugene Wamalwa, who believe the government has committed unforgivable acts in suppressing human rights and implementing burdensome fiscal policies.

Speaking separately, several opposition parties dismissed the President apology as insincere. They questioned the timing and motive of the apology, demanding justice for Kenyans killed during last year protests and activists deported from Tanzania.

"We take note of the reconciliatory tone and public apology issued by President William Ruto. While the shift in tone is welcomed, we must remind the President that apologies, however well-intentioned, must be accompanied by tangible action if they are to carry any meaning for the Kenyan people," said the statement ready by People's Liberation Party Secretary General Asha Bashir.

The leaders said those responsible for abductions, torture and extra-judicial killings must be punished, and victims compensated.

In his message of peace and unity, President Ruto urged Kenyans to work together, focusing less on finding fault and more on building bridges to create a greater nation.

He expressed confidence in Kenya's future, stating, "I have no doubt that our country is blessed, and its future will be greater than its past."

Ruto outlined his scorecard, saying that the "broad-based" government had united the country.

"The word of God tells us how good and pleasant it is for brethren to live together in unity. It is God's perfect will for us to live in unity across political, community and religious divides. This nation will be strong, and we will achieve great exploits," he said.

His deputy Kithure Kindiki called for reflection on the nation's journey, noting that the prayer breakfast is a valuable tradition for contemplating Kenya's shared destiny.

Soul-searching moments

"We need to evaluate our achievements, missed opportunities, and outstanding tasks in the socio-economic transformation of our country. We have an opportunity to reconcile and build better relationships as citizens, neighbors, and across generations, despite challenges, to realise a more cohesive, united, and equitable country, continent, and globe," he said.

The DP urged young people to respect authority and be open to mentorship. "While we respect them, hear them, and apologise when we're wrong, they should also respect older people, if only because they have lived longer. There are lessons you won't learn in college—only in the school of life," he said.

"As we agree to reconcile and build relationships with our children, we respectfully request that they recognize the role we can play—not necessarily in science or what they learn online, but in offering insights that can make their lives even more impactful."

I don't care how many building projects we undertake; if we do not rebuild relationships, trust, love, and respect, we've achieved little. What about your Gen Z? How do you build that bridge?"

BUDGET-MAKING

IEBC seeks Sh57.4b for 2027, to register 6.3m new voters

The Independent Electoral and Boundaries Commission (IEBC) plans to spend Sh57.4 billion in the 2027 General Election.

National Assembly Justice and Legal Affairs Committee Chairman Gitonga Murugara said the agency proposes to spend Sh5.12 billion in various activities and Sh3.7 billion for normal operations in preparation for the elections.

In its proposed budgetary allocation of Sh9.6 billion for 2025/2026, the commission proposes to spend Sh788 million on pending by-elections.

Murugara said IEBC plans to register about 6.3 million new voters in addition to the 22.1 million in the current register ahead of the General Election.

He told the Budget and Appropriation Committee that the commission requires 59,352 election kits; 55,393 for polling stations and 3,959 for training. The agency proposes to replace 45,352 kits bought in 2017, while the 14,000 acquired in 2022 would be reused in 2027.

Murugara said the situation was necessitated by the high bills for election result transmission, court rulings that resulted to reprinting of ballot papers, foreign exchange losses and emergency airlifting of election materials and staff.

The commission Sh3.799 billion has pending bills, out of which legal fees account for Sh2.65 billion.

"My committee has also directed the commission to submit primary documents in support of the pending bills, especially on the legal bills for consideration and scrutiny to ascertain whether the Auditor General should undertake a special audit," said Murugara.

The committee argued that the shortfall in resources is likely to hinder the Office of the Registrar of Political Parties in undertaking critical activities, including the preparation of the General Election.

"The office has made a passionate appeal to the committee for an additional allocation of Sh6.98 billion to cater for budgetary shortfall in the following areas: Sh256.69 million for 2027 elections preparedness, Sh530.09 million for office programmes and activities, and Sh6.19 billion for Political Parties Fund," said Murugara.

The Fund was allocated Sh1.428 billion, which is below the Sh7.618 billion required under Section 24(1) of the Political Parties Act, hence a deficit of Sh6.19 billion. [Edwin Nyarangi]

Murang'a rolls out Sh20b strategy to boost agribusiness growth, jobs

► Governor Irungu Kang'ata says county leads Kenya in avocado, tea and dairy production.

► Upcoming 2025 investment conference aims to drive agro-processing and exports.

FIDDELIS MOGAKA, MURANG'A

Murang'a County has launched a bold plan to attract more than Sh20 billion in investments within its agriculture sector in a meeting that brought together key government officials, investors and agricultural stakeholders.

Speaking at the event that was hosted in collaboration with the Kenya Development Corporation (KDC) and the Ministry of Investments, Trade and Industry (MITI), in readiness for the Murang'a County Investment Conference 2025 next month, Governor Irungu Kang'ata praised the county for its great agricultural productivity.

"Murang'a is well known for its agricultural productivity. It leads in avocado farming, contributing nearly a third of the country's total harvest, which is worth more than Sh4.6 billion each year.

The county is also a major player in tea and dairy production. It produces about 85 million litres of milk annually, placing it among the top three dairy regions in the country,"

Kang'ata said.

The governor also urged investors to partner with the county and explore opportunities across the agriculture value chain.

He described the county as not only a key food producer but also a promising area for agribusiness and agro-industrial development.

The governor pointed out

Murang'a's central location, rich natural resources and enterprising population as major advantages for investors.

"Murang'a is not just a food basket, it is an investment hub. With our strategic location, natural endowment and enterprise readiness, we are primed for transformative agricultural industrialization," said Kang'ata.

Cabinet Secretary for Investments, Trade and Industry, Lee Kinyanjui, highlighted the role counties can play in driving national economic growth adding that that Murang'a had a strong case for investment because of its agricultural strength and readiness for industrial growth.

"Murang'a offers a clear investment case in Kenya's agriculture. We ensure private capital flows to create jobs, boost exports, and promote sustainable growth," said CS Kinyanjui.

Kenya Development Corporation's DG, CPA Norah Ratemo, assured support to Murang'a with funding, investment structuring, and risk reduction to attract investors.

Mediheal hospital hands DCI kidney transplant reports

Mediheal hospital lawyers Katwa Kigen and Conrad Maloba on Wednesday submitted to the Directorate of Criminal Investigations (DCI) headquarters, several documents relating to kidney transplants at the facility.

They submitted the documents to the Transnational Organized Crime Unit (TOCU) officers.

"We have been summoned by the DCI to submit documentation with respect to kidney transplants," said Maloba.

The hospitals proprietor Swarup Mishra was however, not present.

Maloba said that they had to get a court order to release the records to the police due to the patient-doctor confidentiality.

"We have just delivered the files, our SOPs, patients record about 382 files of patients and donors," he said.

The lawyer added that the court is set to offer guidance to the DCI over how to handle them and what can be revealed in court.

He said that TOCU is probing their procedures, process and transplants that have taken place at the facility. The Health Ministry began probing Mediheal on April 17 after a team was formed by CS Aden Duale. [Fred Kagonye]

Blair's visit signals Ruto's bid to use tech amid surveillance fears

► Blair's Institute supports Kenya's digital transformation and public service delivery.

► Experts warn digital bill risks privacy, mass data collection abuses.

NDUNGU GACHANE, NAIROBI

Former British Prime Minister Tony Blair was in Nairobi yesterday. His visit comes at a time when President William Ruto's popularity is waning and the country is engaged in heated debates over the controversial Kenya Information and Communications (Amendment) Bill, 2025—sparking questions about Blair's specific mission in the country.

Blair's organisation, the Tony Blair Institute (TBI), which "helps governments and leaders get things done," advises on strategy, policy, and implementation, unlocking the power of technology across these areas, according to its website.

Established in 2016, TBI also assists governments in leveraging digital tools to improve public service delivery and policy outcomes.

"This includes advising on digital identification systems and the use of artificial intelligence in governance."

Blair's visit comes amid heated debate over a proposed law that digital experts warn 'could usher in one of the most invasive state surveillance regimes in the country's history.'

Political analysts interpret the visit as President Ruto's strategy to gain insights on navigating the challenges posed by the bill.

Digital rights experts have raised concerns about mass data collection, real-time citizen monitoring, and the erosion of human rights under the guise of regulating internet service providers." Experts also warn that the bill could create a cybersecurity nightmare, as internet service providers and government agencies holding vast amounts of sensitive personal data may become prime targets for hackers, rogue insiders and authoritarian misuse.

While President Ruto did not disclose details about Blair's visit, he indicated his administration's willingness to cooperate with the Tony Blair Institute in agriculture and ICT.

"We appreciate our cooperation with The Tony Blair Institute in agriculture and ICT. Our goal is to enhance food security and improve government efficiency through technology," Dr Ruto wrote on his X account Monday. Blair's organisation has been active in Kenya, engaging in ICT partnerships and influencing key policy strategies, especially during former President Uhuru Kenyatta's administration.

In March this year, the Tony Blair Institute of Global Change partnered with the Ministry of Information, Communications, and the Digital Economy to pilot paperless correspondence within ministries, departments and agencies (MDAs), aiming to eliminate bureaucratic delays in service delivery.

After welcoming Blair at State House, Ruto said his administration would collaborate with the private sector to create digital businesses and promote innovation and entrepreneurship. "ICT is a big part of how we intend to deliver our development agenda. We are in talks with telecommunication companies to lay a 100,000 kilometer fiber optic that will reach every corner of Kenya," he said. ## RECOGNITION

Two Kenyan scout leaders scoop top global award in US

Kenya Scouts Association Chief Commissioner Victor Radido and International Commissioner Antony Gitonga in US.

Two senior Kenyan scout leaders have been internationally honoured for their outstanding service to youth development. Victor Radido, Chief Commissioner of the Kenya Scouts Association, and Antony Gitonga, the Association's International Commissioner, jointly received the prestigious Silver World Award from Scouting America.

This award is among the highest distinctions given by the American scouting body, reserved for non-US citizens whose contributions have made a global impact. Since 1971, only three other Kenyans—including founding President Jomo Kenyatta and former President Daniel arap Moi—have been honoured.

Speaking at the Silver Buffalo Awards Dinner in Florida, Radido described the award as a collective achievement of all Kenyan Scouts, volunteers, staff, and supporters. Their recognition follows key milestones, including Kenya Scouts Association's 2024 Growth Award from the World Scout Organization for doubling its membership to 4.4 million youth, supported by nearly 120,000 volunteers, making it the third fastest-growing association worldwide.

Radido, who also chairs the Eastern Africa Scout Zone, has led initiatives like environmental conservation and digital safety training. [Emmanuel Kipchumba] ed by 4.2 per cent and now accounts for nearly 85 per cent of all jobs. Wor-rily, the share of formal jobs has steadily declined from nearly 20 per cent in 2010 to 15 per cent in 2024.

Furthermore, real wages have remained stagnant for over a decade, with average monthly real wages in public and private sectors converging to around Sh70,000, near their lowest level in the past two decades.

On poverty, the World Bank highlighted that while Kenya's fiscal system does reduce inequality, it is "falling short on poverty." "Fiscal policy is more than a budgetary tool—it's a lever for equity. Kenya's system helps narrow inequality, but it is falling short on poverty. To make it work for the poorest, we must spend smarter, not just more," said Naomi Mathenge, Senior Country Economist for World Bank Kenya. The report suggested that expanding cash transfers could yield significant gains, providing fiscal space for more efficient and targeted support for the poor.

BRIAN NGUGI, NAIROBI

The World Bank has delivered a mixed economic scorecard on President William Ruto's administration.

In a new report on Kenya published Tuesday, the World Bank highlighted improvements in key macroeconomic indicators but raised concerns over job scarcity for the youth and shortcomings in poverty reduction efforts.

The report, Beyond the Budget: Fiscal Policy for Growth and Jobs, noted that while macroeconomic indicators have shown improvement since 2024—including declining inflation, a stabilised exchange rate, and stronger international reserves—the overall pace of economic growth has slowed dealing a blow to job creation and poverty reduction.

Kenya's Gross Domestic Product (GDP) is expected to pick up gradually in the medium term, with growth projected to increase from 4.5 per cent in 2025 to about 5.0 per cent in 2026–27.

The economic slowdown stemmed from multiple challenges, including floods, high interest rates, and subdued business sentiment following protests in mid-2024, alongside reduced development spending due to fiscal consolidation efforts.

The new World Bank findings come as the Ruto administration faces increasing social pressure to implement its promises for job creation and stabilising the economy. The Bank maintained that reforms to strengthen fiscal sustainability in an equitable way, while promoting inclusive growth and jobs, are deemed critical to revive a slowing economy and a weak labour market.

Despite resilient agriculture, strong remittance inflows, and a rebound in services, growth was further dampened by weak industrial activity, sluggish private consumption, and policy uncertainty that constrained investment and formal employment growth.

"Despite improvements in Kenya's macroeconomic indicators, the country continues to face structural challenges, including insufficient job creation and low wages, especially among the youth," said Qimiao Fan, the World Bank Division Director for Kenya, Rwanda, Somalia and Uganda.

The report's assessment has revealed the stark realities for young Kenyans, often referred to as 'Gen Z', seeking formal employment. Formal wage employment growth declined to 2.4 percent in 2024.

While total wage employment grew by 3.9 per cent, this was largely driven by the informal sector, which expand-

Literary giant Ngugi wa Thiongo's incisive pen takes the final salute

► Author dies in the US, where he has been living for decades.

DAVID NJAAGA, NAIROBI

Renowned Kenyan author and prominent scholar Prof Ngugi wa Thiongo has died aged 87 after a long battle with health complications, his family announced on Wednesday. Ngugi, who had faced kidney issues and limited mobility in recent years, died on yesterday morning. He had also been undergoing dialysis and previously battled prostate cancer since 1995. In 2019, he underwent triple bypass surgery.

"It is with a heavy heart that we announce the passing of our dad, Ngugi wa Thiongo this Wednesday morning, 28th May 2025. He lived a full life, fought a good fight. As was his last wish, let's celebrate his life and his work," said his daughter Wanjiku wa Ngugi in a social media post. The family said Ngugi's final wish was that his life be celebrated rather than mourned. A spokesperson, Nducu wa Ngugi, is expected to release details of his celebration of life soon.

Ngugi, born James Ngugi on January 5, 1938, was a towering figure in African literature, widely considered East Africa's leading novelist. He was known for writing in both English and Gikuyu, and for promoting indigenous languages through literature.

His works include novels, essays, plays and short stories, often focusing on colonialism, cultural identity and the struggle for justice. His short story The Upright Revolution: Or Why Humans Walk Upright has been translated into more than 100 languages.

In 1977, Ngugi and fellow writer Ngugi wa Mirii co-authored the play Ngaahika Ndeenda, which challenged Kenya's ruling elite and was shut down by the state just six weeks after its debut. He was later detained without trial for over a year. Amnesty International adopted him as a prisoner of conscience.

"Ngugi was never afraid to confront power using the written and spoken word," said Mukoma wa Ngugi, one of his sons and also a writer. He later shared his own grief on social media, saying, "It tears my heart to say that my father, Ngugi wa Thiongo passed away earlier today. I am me because of him in so many ways, as his child, scholar and writer. I love him – I am not sure what tomorrow will bring without him here. I think that is all I have to say for now."

Last year, Prof Ngugi got a lifetime award from more than 300 Kenyans and Africans living in the US for his contribution to literature and social activism. African professionals, business people and literature enthusiasts lauded Mwalimu Ngugi's works and agitation for social justice since the 1960s.

President sued afresh in advisors appointment rows

President William Ruto has been sued afresh over the appointment of advisors.

Human rights organisation, Katiba Institute, in its case filed before High Court judge Lawrence Mugambi, argued that the President has no role in directly hiring people to work in his office or government.

Katiba's lawyer Joshua Malidzo said the President had embarked on an unconstitutional path. "When a President embarks on a potholed constitutional journey meant to undermine the Constitution, he needs to be stopped in his tracks before any further damage to the Constitution," argued Malidzo.

He said the President did not seek the consent or concurrence from the Public Service Commission (PSC) and the Salaries and Remuneration Commission (SRC) before appointing the advisors.

"When a President acts as if the constitutional text is a mere suggestion, usurps the powers of constitutional commissions, creates unconstitutional offices, re-establishes a kitchen cabinet, rewards his loyal supporters with public offices, thereby duplicating roles, and imprudently uses public resources, he needs to be stopped and reminded of the constitutional truths," argued Malidzo.

COURT

DPP has 21 days to decide filmmakers' fate after BBC story

A court has given Director of Public Prosecutions Renson Ingonga 21 days to decide whether to prosecute four filmmakers linked to the controversial BBC documentary 'Blood Parliament'.

Milimani Principal Magistrate Wambo Otieno issued the directive on Wednesday after the prosecution confirmed that investigations were complete and requested additional time to allow the DPP review the police file.

The filmmakers, Brian Adagala, Mark-Denver Karubiu Muchira, and Christopher Wamae Wambugu, who appeared in court, were not charged after being informed that the DPP had not yet approved their prosecution.

They are accused of conspiring to publish "false and defamatory" content via BBC platforms, following release of a documentary detailing alleged police brutality during anti-tax protests.

Magistrate Otieno, however, ordered that the four remain on the Sh10,000 anticipatory bail. Additionally, the court summoned two DCI officers, Nickson Kinywa and Wekesa Wechuli compelling them to explain why confiscated items belonging to the filmmakers have not yet been returned. [Nancy Gitonga]

CONSTRUCTION

Engineers flag low quality cement in Kenyan market

The Institution of Engineers of Kenya (IEK) has raised alarm over proliferation of substandard cement in the market.

This, the engineers warn, points to a potential disaster in the construction industry if urgent action is not taken.

IEK president Eng Shammah Kiteme said they are deeply concerned over the deteriorating quality of cement, even in products bearing the Kenya Bureau of Standards (KEBS) mark of quality. "Our members have documented up to 25 per cent reduction in the compressive strength of concrete prepared from cement from several brands, undermining the strength and durability of concrete used in construction. This is a grave threat to public safety," said Kiteme in a statement.

He said the built environment must meet certain performance thresholds to withstand everyday use and natural shocks. [Emmanuel Kipchumba]

University students on campus. A new directive by President Trump suspending foreign student US visa applications has jolted thousands of Kenyan hopefuls seeking placements in American universities.

Thousands of Kenyan students in limbo as US stops visa interviews

► The move is meant to step up social media vetting for applicants.

► The number of Kenyan students in US has been rising steadily over past few year.

LEWIS NYAUNDI, NAIROBI

Thousands of Kenyan students seeking to join American universities have suffered a major blow after the Trump administration halted new visa interviews for international students.

The decision comes barely a week after the US revoked Harvard University's authority to enroll non-American learners through the Student and Exchange Visitor Program (SEVP).

However, the decision was halted by a US federal Court. In the latest order, US Secretary of State Marco Rubio directed its embassies abroad to stop scheduling new visa interview appointments for students and exchange visitors.

The halt, effective immediately, was aimed at expanding social media vetting for visa applicants under the F, M, and J categories.

According to a memo quoted by Reuters, the US Department of State is "conducting a review of existing operations and processes for screening and vetting of student and exchange visitor visa applicants," and based on that, it plans to implement new guidelines requiring broader social media checks.

"Consulate sections should not add any additional student or exchange visitor visa appointment capacity," the memo reads.

Data from the Open Doors Report on International Educational Exchange, the number of Kenyan students studying in the United States has been steadily increasing over the past eight years.

From 2016 to 2024, Kenyan student numbers have surged by over 40%, reaching an all-time high of 4,507 in the 2023/24 academic year.

In the 2016/17 academic year, just over 3,100 Kenyan students were enrolled in US institutions. That number has grown each year—rising to about 3,300 in 2017/18, then to roughly 3,450 in 2018/19, and hitting the 3,700 mark in 2019/20.

Even with the disruptions of the COVID-19 pandemic, numbers remained relatively strong, with 3,502 students recorded in 2020/21 and 3,799 the following year.

By 2022/23, the figure had surged past 4,000, reaching 4,059 students. The most recent data for the 2023/24 academic year shows a record high of 4,507 Kenyan students currently studying in the United States.

The implications of the halted visa process stretch beyond individual students. According to the Association of International Educators, international students contributed over $40 billion to the US economy in 2023 alone, with Kenyan students accounting for a notable share.

The freeze also threatens to derail scholarship timelines, disrupt campus planning for international cohorts, and increase anxiety among parents who have spent years saving for their children's education.

University counselors in Nairobi have already reported cases of deferred admissions, uncertain travel plans, and mental health distress among affected students. "We've seen a wave of panic. Students don't know whether to accept offers, defer, or apply elsewhere," said Esther Wanjiru, an international education consultant.

On May 23, the Trump administration announced it has revoked Harvard University's ability to admit international students.

A statement by the United States Department of Homeland Security, seen by The Standard, directed the termination of Harvard University's Student and Exchange Visitor Program (SEVP) certification.

This means Harvard can no longer enroll foreign students and existing foreign students must transfer or lose their legal status. "Harvard's leadership has created an unsafe campus environment by permitting anti-American, pro-terrorist agitators to harass and physically assault individuals, including many Jewish students, and otherwise obstruct its once-venerable learning environment" the statement reads.

The decision came after months of push and pull between the university and the Trump administration after the institution's decision to decline some directives to curb protests against the Israel-Palestine war to govern on-campus protests.

However, Harvard University filed a lawsuit challenging the Trump administration's directive, terming it "unlawful" and "retaliatory."

"The government's action is unlawful. We are fully committed to maintaining Harvard's ability to host our international students and scholars, who hail from more than 140 countries and enrich the University – and this nation – immeasurably," Harvard said in a statement.

Harvard filed a lawsuit in the United States District Court for Massachusetts, seeking to block the DHS directive.

The university argued the action was a retaliatory response to its refusal to comply with politically motivated demands on curriculum content, faculty hiring, and admissions.

Samidoh: From Mugithi to fighting bandits

► Artiste downplays his police transfer from Gilgil to Baringo as routine.

► Kikuyu crooner rattled the political landscape after his fans' chants went viral.

KEVIN TUNOI, NAKURU

The rhythm of Mugithi nights may soon miss one of its most beloved voices. Samuel Muchoki, famous as Samidoh, a celebrated Mugithi artiste and police officer, has been thrust from the pulsating night-life of Kenya's entertainment scene to the isolated terrains of Baringo County. This in a move viewed by many as a disciplinary slap by the National Police Service (NPS).

Until recently, stationed at the Anti-Stock Theft Unit (ASTU) headquarters in Gilgil, Nakuru County, Samidoh's reassignment followed a viral incident that has shaken the entertainment and political spheres.

The video clip, which circulated like wildfire across social media platforms, showed a raucous crowd chanting "Wantam", a deliberate distortion of "One Term", a catchphrase increasingly adopted by critics of President William Ruto as a political jab ahead of the 2027 elections.

Samidoh, ever the showman, is seen continuing his performance amid the chants, leading to speculation that he may have been indirectly amplifying a controversial political message. Barely days after the clip made rounds online, the NPS issued transfer orders that would see the singer redeployed from Gilgil to Baringo, a volatile region often associated with insecurity and harsh working conditions.

Speaking to The Standard, Samidoh confirmed his transfer. "I was told I'm supposed to report to Baringo today," he said. "I'm reporting to Gilgil today for further deployment."

While he tried downplay the circumstances, saying police officers are frequently reassigned, the timing and the destination of his new posting tell a different story.

Those in the entertainment industry, as well as keen political followers, see the move as less of a routine reshuffling and more of a clear disciplinary message.

It's a huge turn for Samidoh, who once served in Nairobi under the Ken-

Mugithi music artist Samidoh performs at Royal Bentely lounge in Nairobi at a past event. [David Gichuru, Standard]

The musician has not just been a fixture in Kenya's musical circles; he has also been a favourite in Nairobi's vibrant nightspots, where he regularly belts out his chart-topping hits to jam-packed crowds. His performances are more than just shows; they are cultural events, drawing Mugithi lovers from all walks of life.

His absence from this circuit due to the Baringo posting, will significantly dent his music career, especially in terms of live performances and fans engagement.

The saga adds to a string of controversies that have surrounded Samidoh in recent years. In January 2023, then Deputy President, Rigathi Gachagua, publicly called on the artiste to "put his house in order" following a highly publicised altercation between Samidoh, his wife Edday Nderitu and nominated Senator Karen Nyamu at a Dubai nightclub.

Neglected tropical diseases fight suffers as donor funding dries up

► Health facilities forced to tap Facility Improvement Fund to fight NTDs.

► Worms, jiggers, bilharzia and intestinal worms persist as counties face budget crisis.

STEPHEN RUTTO, ELDORET

Counties are struggling to finance the fight against Neglected Tropical Diseases (NTDs) due to declining funding, making it difficult to meet the 2030 target of eliminating these diseases.

Health stakeholders meeting in Eldoret noted that most counties have been relying on donor support to combat conditions such as bilharzia, intestinal worms, trachoma, jiggers and sleeping sickness.

During forums hosted by Amref, senior county officials discussed ways to bridge the funding gaps in the fight against neglected diseases.

Vincent Ouma, Amref's Programs Director for NTDs, stressed the need for counties to take full responsibility for eliminating these diseases after years of donor assistance.

He pointed out that the WHO has identified 21 NTDs, with 17 of them being prevalent in Kenya.

"Twenty-five million Kenyans are at risk of one NTD or another. We have 10 million people who require treatment. This is a significant number that demands our attention," Ouma stated.

Vihiga County has allocated Sh2.5 million to support these efforts.

The county's Director of Public Health, Martin Osotsi, said health facilities have been forced to tap into the Facility Improvement Fund to sustain the battle against NTDs.

"For the 2025/26 financial year, we have allocated Sh2.5 million towards elimination efforts," Osotsi said.

"We recognise that donor funding is declining, so health facilities must use their internal collections to support the fight against NTDs."

Phanuel Khaenga, the County Coordinator for Neglected Tropical Diseases, noted that jiggers and bilharzia are the most prevalent NTDs in Vihiga.

In Trans Nzoia, Sh25 million is needed to prevent and manage neglected diseases, particularly soil-transmitted intestinal worms, bilharzia and jiggers.

The county's NTDs Coordinator, Nobert Musundi, reported that seven per cent of the population is affected by intestinal worm infestations, while two per cent suffers from bilharzia.

"We require Sh25 million, but due to budget constraints, we have requested Sh12 million to begin the interventions. We hope the County Assembly will approve this amount. We also plan to partner with various stakeholders to help bridge the funding gap."

Bungoma County's Executive for Health Caroline Makali, emphasised the significant impact of these neglected ailments and advocated for increased exchequer funding to enable counties to eliminate the diseases by 2030.

She noted that intestinal worms are the most common NTD in Bun-goma and committed to progressively increasing their allocation for this purpose.

To eradicate these diseases by 2030, we must adopt a multi-sectoral approach," Makali stated, adding, "The budget for addressing neglected ailments is insufficient."

It will cover the purchase of chemicals, mass drug administration and public sensitisation."

She added that Tongaren area is particularly affected by intestinal worm infestations.

William Olata, the Director of Public Health in Kakamega County, reported a bilharzia prevalence of 4.3 per cent, with soil-transmitted diseases affecting 8.3 per cent of the population.

He mentioned that a sponsored mass drug administration programme had produced positive results, including a reduction in the prevalence rate."However, we ar.

Kenya joins global fight against deadly snakebites

Kenya has joined the Global Snake Task Force to tackle the rising issue of snake envenoming.

Through this initiative, the country aims to spotlight the neglected health crisis and help reduce cases of snakebites—one of the world's deadliest yet most overlooked health threats.

The task force was established during the 78th World Health Assembly (WHA) in Geneva and is co-chaired by Kenya's Health Cabinet Secretary, Aden Duale, and Elhadj As Sy, Chancellor of the Liverpool School of Tropical Medicine.

Duale noted that, as in many other countries, snakebite envenoming is a major public health concern in Kenya, with rural communities and children being the most affected. "After years of snakebite being overlooked, successfully placing this issue on the official WHA agenda for the first time this decade is a significant milestone and demonstrates Kenya's commitment to addressing this avoidable health challenge," Duale stated. He emphasised that by placing snakebite on the global health agenda, the task force is advocating for improved health, safety, and livelihoods, while also setting an example for other nations to act.

Snakebite is among the world's deadliest yet most neglected tropical diseases. According to the World Health Organisation, a person dies from a snakebite every five minutes globally, with many others left with severe injuries or permanent disabilities. The task force seeks to elevate global awareness of snake envenoming and mobilise resources for effective treatments and interventions.

Dr Patrick Amoth, Director General for Health, stated that putting snakebite envenoming on the global agenda is a major milestone in addressing a challenge that affects many people in Africa.

Elhadj As Sy, Co-Chair of the Global Snakebite Taskforce, noted that while the risk of snakebites may seem remote to many global leaders, the devastating and preventable human toll cannot be ignored. [Caroline Chebet]

Briefing

NAIVASHA. BHANG WORTH SH3M DESTROYED

Security agents in Naivasha have seized and destroyed bhang valued at over Sh3 million in a renewed effort to combat the illegal drug trade in the lakeside town. The security team reported that the bhang was stored in a rented house in Kayole Estate, on the outskirts of Naivasha, where it was awaiting distribution to users. Naivasha Deputy County Commissioner (DCC) Josiah Odongo stated that the security team has been on high alert due to reports of increased bhang use among children and youths. Odongo announced improved surveillance measures to tackle the drug issue. [Antony Gitonga]

KILIFI. TRADERS PROTEST DISPUTED MARKET POLLS

A section of traders at Kwa Jiwa market in Malindi town, Kilifi County, have protested against the election of new market committee officials, stating that outsiders infiltrated the process. Led by Joyce Wambui and Mark Kimwele, they said that county officials officiating the exercise had sneaked in non-market traders to stifle the polls. Wambui called for the postponement of the process and threatened to move to court if it continued, arguing that it was unfair to genuine traders at the market. [Nehemiah Okwembah]

KERICHO. COURT HALTS KTDA FERTILISER TENDER

The High Court in Kericho has temporarily halted Kenya Tea Development Agency (Holdings) Limited (KTDA) from awarding the fertiliser supply tender. This follows a constitutional petition by SLDR International Limited, which challenged the tendering process, citing irregularities. SLDR seeks legal scrutiny before the contract moves forward. Justice Joseph Serگون issued a conservatory order restraining KTDA from awarding or supplying the 99,875 metric tonnes of NPK 26:5:5 fertiliser contract for 2025 until the matter is resolved. [Nikko Tanui]

TURKANA. COUNTY BOOSTS CHOLERA WATCH

Turkana County has intensified surveillance on Kenya-South Sudan border to contain the spread of cholera reported in the Kalobeyei settlement within the Kakuma refugee camp. County Health Executive Dr Joseph Epem, said the area has witnessed increased cases of cholera in the recent past. Dr Epem confirmed that the outbreak originated in neighbouring South Sudan, where health officials have reported at least 172 deaths in one week. "In response to the outbreak, we have banned food hawking around the Kakuma refugee camp and Kalobeyei settlement to minimise the risk of further spread. [Lucas Ng'asike]

EDITORIAL

Kenyans, Tanzanians' war of words needless

The deportation of some eminent personalities from Tanzania Sunday last week has taken a new trajectory and, unfortunately, degenerated into a war of words between Kenyans and Tanzanians.

Martha Karua, lawyer Gloria Kimani, human rights activist Lyn Ngugi and former Chief Justice (CJ) Willy Mutunga were detained at Julius Nyerere International Airport before being deported. Boniface Mwangi was arrested in his hotel room and later deported by road and abandoned in Ukunda, Mombasa, after being tortured.

The deportation was done on the express orders of President Samia Suluhu who alleged that the Kenyans wanted to cause chaos in Tanzania. Suluhu's claim was wrong because Karua and team had been invited by the East African Law Society as observers in a case in which Mr Tundu Lissu, leader of Tanzania's main opposition party, Chadema is charged with treason. Former CJ David Maraga managed to attend the court session.

Suluhu's action was drastic and flew in the face of the spirit of the East African Community (EAC) which, among other things, guarantees free movement. It was preposterous and defamatory to suggest that the team - that included Karua, a lawyer-cum-politician, and the two former CJs - was on a mission to destabilise Tanzania.

Following the events in Tanzania, Kenyans on X took on Suluhu through memes, in the same manner they besieged President William Ruto after the June 2024 Gen Z demonstrations. However, despite the injustice done to Kenyans in Tanzania, the caricatures and insults being directed at the Tanzanian president via social media are most repugnant. While we are not trying to cheapen the wrong that Suluhu and her administration have done, using such vile language even against an ordinary civilian is disrespectful and degrading. It is important that our young people desist from such behaviour, however angry they are with Suluhu.

Besides Suluhu, Kenyans are also attacking Tanzanians at large and the Tanzanian youths are also attacking their Kenyan counterparts and leaders. Tanzanian legislators have not been left behind and, just like Gen Zs, they are hurling insults at Karua and all Kenyans and, shockingly, see nothing wrong with the torture of Mwangi and Ugandan activist Agather Atuhaire.

In a nutshell, a fight is raging in the cyber space between Kenyans and Tanzanians. This is wrong as they ought to be reading from the same script on the issues at hand at this time. Instead of insulting each other, they should, like the rest of the world, be demanding the release of Lissu, who is clearly undergoing political persecution. Secondly, they should be jointly condemning the mistreatment of Kenyans and the Ugandan activist and demanding justice.

Calling out governments in the region over rising authoritarianism should be a shared responsibility of all people in the EAC.

Tanzanians and Kenyans have enjoyed cordial relationships for ages and should not allow issues that should unite them even more to divide them.

BEYOND WORDS

Why State must not snoop on Kenyans' online activities

ELIAS MOKUA

The Bill that seeks to compel internet providers to track and report all user activity to the authorities will damage the government reputation irreparably. The movers of the Bill need to weigh the consequences of their proposition independent of the fear driving them.

On several occasions, the government itself has lamented how negative the citizens were to its performance. The general public reception of government initiatives is increasingly sceptical. The public trust in government has drastically dived south. The memories and wounds of the infamous abductions are still fresh. Why on earth would a Bill that targets individual internet usage preferences in this context interest the government?

I have no doubt whatsoever the government has quality intelligence sources to advise on such a move. But I do not see how anyone who is interested in national stability and building government reputation from where it stands today would be persuaded this is a logical law to enact. I would imagine what the government really needs at this point is positive press, strong public relations with its own citizens and any form of trust building. Are some quarters overzealous in their effort to protect the government? Let us have superior reasoning here.

First, already the Bill has drawn negative reaction because internet control is a sign of a government scared of its own shadow. Just pick any control where the government is on top of its agenda. You will see that the least bother for the government is tracking people's online consumption preferences. We have the NIS, among other security personnel, who are trained to track criminal online behaviour including cyber terrorism. The global fight against terrorism has largely succeeded because of these type of experts. I believe they are up to task of reining in local criminal elements who could be utilising online spaces for ill motives.

Second, there is no publicly empirical evidence to suggest that high access and control of private online information and consumer behaviour improves government performance. More specifically, such evidence would help the public understand the correlation between control of individual usage of internet and improved security, assuming this is the line the government is ultimately pursuing. If the public does not see a strong correlation, the movers of the Bill will be doing a great disservice to the current and future regimes. An apparent good is a dangerous goal to try achieve.

Third, for a government with such massive powers at its disposal, there are a million and one ways to engage its critics. The most reasonable one is to focus on government service delivery and put to shame the critics. People align themselves with a performing government very fast. Of course, create forums where critics run their narratives and run with your narrative. As long as Kenya is a democracy, plurality of ideas, visions, innovations and possible government systems are what citizens celebrate. If the tension of the two worldviews is run online, so be it.

Fourth, it will be worrying if online users more precisely online activism is engineered to sabotage the government of the day. There is a whole world of a difference between political activism of whatever magnitude and online communities that dig on government service delivery. The Bill seems to shut the window on the latter. That is not patriotism.

Fifth, violation of privacy rights is indeed a violation of fundamental human rights. What actually is the threat we are facing warranting this kind of radical surveillance? The online political mood, depending on which platforms you visit, could swing from one end to another. This is a very safe space where people do say anything and justly so. There is no publicly available data to suggest that online robust, hot political run ins amount to endangering national security. If there is such data it will be good to throw in the public for informed discussion. There are people who love horror movies. Yet, such audiences are not murderers.

Last, such a Bill may lead to profiling people based on their identities: Religion, race, tribe, territory and so forth. Is this all necessary? Really?

Dr Mokua is Executive Director of Loyola Centre for Media and Communication

PALAVER

Sometimes, says Shisanya Majanja [shisanyamajanja@gmail.com], we wrongly blame the government for rendering poor services forgetting that we, the people, are employed by the same government to give decent services to the citizens. "Take, for example, a level 4 hospital in Kakamega, where patients are fleeced by clinical officers to buy prescribed medicine at four times the normal price. Targeted victims are the old, illiterate or those too sick to demand to pay through the prescribed Paybill number. Shame on you, medics; even as you scream yourselves hoarse about poor working conditions."

What is it, wonders Githuku Mungai [githukumungai@gmail.com], that President William Ruto wants to build at the State House? "After the recent major renovations which we were told were necessary, the Budget for 2025/2026 is said to reflect Sh2.8 billion for works at the State House. What else is the President thinking of building at State House? Funnily, a few months ago, the President called himself a 'builder' and said he is building at many places, the State House included."

As the 2027 general elections approach, notes Pamilla Mugure [pamilamugure@gmail.com], political conversations in Kenya are intensifying. "President William Ruto and former Deputy President Rigathi Gachagua are subjects of early public speculation. Some citizens are firmly behind Dr Ruto's leadership while others see Mr Gachagua as a rising contender. Meanwhile, others are watching for new faces to emerge. Kenyans are already making their preferences known, setting the stage for a heated and closely watched presidential race."

It is three months since the area at Kencom bus stop to Taifa Road was fenced off, reports Japheth Amugada [dr.amugada@gmail.com]. "Yet peeping through the fence, it is clear that no work is going on. This fence has inconvenienced people on Aga Khan Walk heading towards Hilton Hotel or International Life House. The fence has also reduced the space for buses. What was the urgency of fencing this area and then sliding into slumber for three months? Inconveniencing Nairobians?"

Should Senate be crowned the upper House?

JAMES KATHILI,
ADVOCATE OF THE
HIGH COURT

Time for it take to its rightful place

The Senate is the upper House even before it is so stated. The Constitution envisages an upper House and a lower House. The renewed push by senators to have the Senate "occupy" its constitutional position is therefore justified and requires a swift settlement to end power games between it and the National Assembly. The Senate has the mandate to undertake a legislative framework for resource allocation to the counties. The Senate also participates in critical law making, considering and debating Bills relating to the counties. It further ensures the resources entrusted to all the counties are utilised in accordance with the law. It also has oversight responsibilities including exercising oversight over national revenue allocated to county governments and also hears and determines impeachment charges against governors. All that remains is to have it expressly stated in the supreme law in order to bring this matter to rest. Let Senate take its rightful place.

House looking for imaginary powers

The Senate should concentrate on its primary function of representing the interests of the counties and their governments and stop pursuing imaginary powers which are not in the Supreme Law. Besides exercising oversight over the counties, the Constitution donates powers to the Senate to oversee county legislation and revenue allocation. However, while the Senate participates in lawmaking, all Bills are subject to approval by the National Assembly, meaning the Senate does not have exclusive legislative powers. The latest clamour by senators, that has been supported by former Prime Minister Raila Odinga, is a recipe for unnecessary power games which have manifested between the two legislative arms since the onset of devolution. It is not open to debate that the Senate's primarily focuses on protecting the interests of county governments while the National Assembly represents the general population. Clearly, the National Assembly handles a wider range of legislation compared to the Senate. Let's not split hairs as the roles of both Houses are clearly defined.

FINANCE BILL

Why Zero-based budgeting could be a game-changer for Kenya

The Finance Bill 2025 is not just a fiscal instrument but an existential audit of the nation's soul. With public debt at 68.3 per cent of GDP, a threshold the World Economic Forum warns flirts with distress, this Bill tests whether Kenya can reallocate scarcity into shared prosperity. At its core lies Zero-Based Budgeting (ZBB), a radical shift in governance philosophy. No line item is inherited. No expense is automatic. Every shilling must fight for its place in a country where 35 per cent of citizens survive on less than $2 a day. ZBB is no longer about balance sheets but about dismantling everyday inequality.

ZBB overturns the ritual of "last year's plus 5 per cent," stripping patronage and inefficiency of their quiet immunity. Ministries, counties, and agencies must now justify every coin from scratch, anchoring budgets to need, impact, and equity. Early signals are unambiguous: Budgets for executive offices, long sanctuaries of opulence, have been cut by 18 per cent; executive offices, with savings redirected to need based development. This is ZBB in action: Shifting resources from political theatrics to programmes that sustain life itself.

Even symbolic projects face scrutiny. The long delayed expansion of Jomo Kenyatta International Airport, built for 7.5 million passengers but straining under 10 million, must now justify its $650 million upgrade. It must prove job creation, tourism growth, and intra-African trade gains. Development must earn its budget, not inherit it.

This is ZBB's dual promise: Fiscal discipline married to developmental intentionality. Take the Nairobi Malaba transport corridor. Under the old system, its funding risked being sidelined by legacy projects with political clout. Under ZBB, it survives with airtight metrics: 30 per cent logistics cost reductions, faster market access for smallholder farmers, and regional integration dividends. Similarly, a proposed digital ID system must now demonstrate how it will reduce financial exclusion, which still traps 23 per cent of Kenyans, rather than serving as another vanity tech platform.

Wavinya Makai,

ZBB's transformative power lies in its ruthless transparency. For decades, Kenyans unwittingly funded a shadow state: Ghost projects, duplicated allocations, and tenders rigged for shell companies. The Auditor General's reports read like graveyards of lost billions. ZBB wields a scalpel: Programmes that cannot articulate their purpose face cuts; tax exemptions lacking proof of local job creation or supply chain impact are revoked. It terrifies the political class by replacing backroom immunity with front page accountability. Yet caution is none-negotiable. While Kenya's debt crisis demands austerity, austerity without compassion is cruelty. ZBB risks becoming a blunt weapon if ministries prioritise easily quantifiable projects like highways over social programmes. Slashing school feeding schemes to fund a bypass may balance books but deepen hunger in Mathare. Counties like Mandera or West Pokot, lacking data expertise to build watertight cases, risk being outpaced by resourced regions.

ZBB must be guided by a moral compass. Redirecting Nairobi's vanity street lighting to boreholes in Kitui isn't just efficient; it's equitable in a nation where the richest 10 per cent hoard 40 per cent of wealth while the poorest 10 per cent subsist on 1.2 per cent. Every budget decision must pass an equity stress test.

ZBB also exposes systemic frailties. Only 12 of Kenya's 47 counties have staff trained in cost benefit analysis. Parliament's Budget Office lacks capacity to audit 80 per cent of submissions. Without urgent digitisation and training, ZBB risks becoming another paper tiger, co-opted to serve elite interests rather than public needs.

But the 2025 Bill plants seeds of hope. It mandates that 30 per cent of all ZBB justifications draw directly from public participation data. A mother in Kibera can now demand funding for her local clinic to reduce maternal deaths, not because it sits in a swing constituency, but because it saves lives. A farmer in Bungoma can advocate for grain storage over ceremonial ribbon cutting. Innovations like Nyamira's Banana Magic haircare venture transition from quirky novelties to scalable enterprises worthy of public investment.

Voting out 'Kasongo', bringing in 'Wamunyoro' is not the answer

The coming together of opposition leaders to form what Kenyans have dubbed the Wamunyoro group was an anti-climactic for many of us seeking national renewal in 2027. The group which brought together many recycled members of previous administrations included some people with a chequered past that disqualifies their candidacy for leadership in the Kenya we want.

A more troubling charge against the Wamunyoro group is that they are obsessed with replacing the Kenya Kwanza (KK) administration and do not seem to offer alternative solutions to the myriad economic challenges bedeviling the nation. Although the national consensus is that the KK administration is irredeemable, the Gen Z revolution was symptomatic of a nation that has undergone fundamental social changes that require more than merely sending the President to Sugoi. That the Wamunyoro group do not understand these fundamental changes is ample evidence that they are not the transition leaders that will midwife a new Kenya.

Moreover, and proof the Wamunyoro group slept through the Gen Z revolution, their strategy for denying Ruto a second term aims at cobbling tribal kingpins in order to dominate the ethnic voting block notwithstanding that a critical constituency in 2027 comprises a youthful generation that has declared its antipathy for identity politics. That their factory settings are firmly rooted in tribal ideology means that they are still living in Egypt while those looking for change in 2027 have long crossed over to Canaan.

Since the gathering at Wamunyoro village, former Deputy President Rigathi Gachagua has launched his Democracy for Citizens Party (DCP) in preparation for 2027 elections. DCP is a product of a firmly held belief that the way to uplift the interests of a community is to form a regional party to fight for allocation of national resources. Contrary to the thinking behind this political strategy, the high unemployment rate in the country and the underlying reason for the Gen Z uprising is a product of this tribal ideology.

According to this tribal ideology, Kenyans are perceived as cultural beings whose strengths and abilities are solely determined by their ethnicity. To ensure equity, this tribal ideology requires the government to play the central role of distributing resources so that each community gets its fair share of national resources. Since prosperity is determined by those who wield power, this tribal ideology makes politics a zero sum game where different ethnic groups fight for leadership positions in order to influence economic outcomes.

Given inefficiencies inherent in centrally managed economies, over-reliance on the visible hand of the government to allocate resources has produced a country that is perpetually borrowing and raising taxes in order to meet funding needs. Inevitably, heavy external borrowing has resulted in unacceptable levels of sovereign debt that makes Kenya vulnerable to manipulation by international lenders while increased borrowing in the local market has resulted in crowding out of a more efficient private sector.

The generation that has borne the pain of big government inefficiencies is the Gen Z whose dreams of employment have been shattered by the cumulative effect of bad governance. To make matters worse, attempts to voice their discontent has been ruthlessly put down by an administration that is determined to protect the interest of an entrenched old guard.

As the 2027 election cycle draws near, it is clearly obvious that the Kenya we want will not be realised by merely replacing Kasongo with Wamunyoro but by uprooting a tribal ideology that has influenced political and economic policies in the past. As a starting point, Kenyan must look for a new leadership that subscribes to an anthropocentric liberal ideology that respects human rights and individual freedoms. Unlike the old guard who wanted a paternalistic government that can be controlled, a "woke" youthful generation wants a democracy that respects human rights and economic freedoms.

Historically, nations transiting from traditional to liberal values have been confronted by two competing ideological orientations. The first ideological option seeks to empower the private sector by limiting government influence in the economy. This option believes the best way to stimulate the economy is by managing the interest rate regime in order to enable the private sector and individuals to thrive. Instead of wasting time telling us that 'Kasongo must go', Kenyans of this ideological persuasion will need to start preparing campaign platforms outlining strategies for reducing the role of government in the economy. An interesting point of discussion, for instance, would be a proposal to reduce our 47 county 'crime scenes'.

The second option for those campaigning for 2027 elections is to continue using the government to allocate resources to safeguard regional balance. The economic consequence of this approach is, however, similar to the effects of central command model that has influenced economic policies since independence. The onus of those who wish to continue with this approach will be to explain why a central command economy is still the best option for the Kenya we want.

Torture

Suluhu has changed public perception of female leaders

JOSEPH LISTER NYARINGO

President Samia Suluhu appears to be poorly schooled in the history of the United Republic of Tanzania under the founding president, Mwalimu Julius Nyerere, whose Ujamaa philosophy entailed cooperation and collaboration with liberation movements in Africa during the fight against colonialism. It lacks logic for Mama Suluhu to curtail activists from neighbouring countries from showing solidarity with opposition figures in Tanzania whose rights are allegedly being violated by her regime.

If Nyerere sympathised with liberation movements like the African National Congress, Mozambique's Mozambique Liberation Front, and Angola's People's Movement for the Liberation of Angola by providing a safe haven and financial support to these groups, why should Suluhu renege on this philosophy? Tanzania has always been a welcoming nation, especially offering itself as a base for hosting forces from various countries during the freedom struggle against the yoke of colonialism.

It is therefore repugnant for Suluhu's government to bar Kenyan and Ugandan nationals whose only alleged mistake is being in solidarity with the Chama Party Leader Tundu Lisu who is facing treason charges in the country. If Nyerere empathised with fellow Africans who were going through colonial torture, why is Suluhu violating that same spirit? Interestingly, she is the leader of the Chama Cha Mapinduzi which Nyerere was a key founding member.

It is even more illogical that the Tanzanian President has, in fact, violated the protocol governing the East African Community, which permits the free movement of persons within the region for trade, socialisation, and other matters of mutual importance. On the global stage, women leaders are often perceived as more empathetic and collaborative, with a focus on building consensus and promoting equity and equality.

For instance, leaders such as former German Chancellor Angela Merkel, former New Zealand Prime Minister Jacinda Ardern, and Liberian President Ellen Johnson Sirleaf have received widespread acclaim for their ability to unite people and address pressing issues affecting their nations. These examples starkly contrast with the actions of Mama Suluhu, if reports from the media regarding alleged human rights abuses are accurate.

Notably, Suluhu assumed office following the passing of the late President John Pombe Magufuli in 2021, as stipulated by the country's constitution, which dictates that the vice president takes over in the event of a sitting president's demise.

One wonders how Suluhu wishes to be remembered after leaving office. Moreover, many people in East Africa question why she has seemingly abandoned the legacy of her predecessor, the late Magufuli, whose passing sent shockwaves across the African continent. Despite his leadership flaws, Magufuli was widely regarded as a champion of the underprivileged, addressing their challenges with compassion and empathy.

His sudden demise was mourned by millions who saw him as a leader who genuinely cared for the poor, often making roadside decisions aimed at alleviating their suffering. It is puzzling, therefore, that Suluhu appears to have undergone a significant transformation, seemingly lacking the empathy and compassion typically associated with maternal figures.

When a woman leader adopts authoritarian tendencies reminiscent of global leaders like Vladimir Putin, Yoweri Museveni, and Kim Jong-un, it raises concerns about the future of effective leadership and democracy worldwide.

ELECTIONS

It is time Kenyans started choosing political leaders based on their performance, not riches

Kenya, like many nations, operates on a democratic system of governance. Every few years, citizens elect leaders, a process hailed as the hallmark of freedom and representation. It is a system rooted in ancient Greece where the most educated and wealthy men were chosen to make decisions on behalf of the people.

But let's pause for a moment and ask: Does popularity truly equal leadership? Does being rich, well-educated, attractive, or charismatic automatically translate to competence? Democracy, while noble in theory, often rewards the loudest voice, not the wisest mind. Leadership is a skill, one that can be taught, refined, and measured.

Yet, in Kenya, we repeatedly see individuals with questionable backgrounds and values rise to power because they appeal to the masses, not because they are qualified to lead. Wealth, especially wealth acquired through theft, seems to have become the ticket to political success. Society has conditioned us to associate money success with intelligence and leadership. We must also remember and learn from those who led with purpose and principle, even without formal qualifications.

The late Masoud Mwachima of Likoni stands out. He may not have had an impressive academic background, but he possessed a rare gift of visionary leadership. He connected with the people, understood their needs, and worked tirelessly for their development. In Kenya, we have a constitution that was voted in by the majority and serves as the backbone of our governance. Yet every election cycle, we complain about the same issues: Non-performance, corruption, arrogance, and betrayal of public trust.

What if we dared to rethink the system? What if political leadership worked like a corporate CEO role? Where leaders are hired based on performance, track record, and vision? What if incentives were tied to delivery, and failure meant immediate removal, even life jail time? Such a shift could filter out the jokers and self-seekers, leaving only competent, visionary individuals to manage our nation's affairs.

Imagine a Kenya where leadership is earned, not bought. Where public servants are driven by results, not riches. Where the office of the leader inspires respect because it is occupied by those who lead with integrity, skill, and accountability. Kenya deserves leaders who perform, not just those who charm. It's time to stop treating elections like popularity contests. It's time to start treating leadership like the serious business it is. Mulumu Mwangi, Marketing and Brand building Consultant

Do not pay people to give their views

We all have come across the term 'public participation'. Accountability, transparency and involvement of all citizens in decision making is the reason we have public participation. However, it has been reduced to a mere formality where the politicians orchestrate the forums to suit their personal interests rather than reflecting the genuine sentiments of Kenyans.

In recent months, Kenyans have been subjected to forums fashioned as public participation where people have been mobilised and coached on what to say about a particular Bill to settle some political scores.

During NG-CDF and Finance Bill public participation forums, some participants affiliated with some political operatives were tasked to rubber stamp decisions already made, thus reducing the vital constitutional requirement to a platform for legitimising a process that is neither inclusive nor transparent. We must understand that he who feeds you, dictates what you must do as you cannot bite the hand that feeds you.

Taking money to attend public participation forums paves way for manipulation. Public participation remains a powerful idea that is yet to be fully exploited. Newton Kimaiyo Nakuru

BANDITRY

It is dishonest to blame Interior CS over insecurity

The killing of a Catholic priest in Kerio Valley is unfortunate and must be condemned. Father Allice Bett was shot dead while returning from mass. This incident demonstrates that no one is safe along the Kerio Valley. Lives of women, children and security personnel have been lost to the bandits who roam the area in broad daylight.

It is sad that instead of the leaders in the region working together in the search for lasting peace, they point an accusing finger at Interior CS Kipchumba Murkomen. The truth of the matter is that acts of lawlessness have reduced because of concerted efforts by security personnel and the residents in the fight against banditry and cattle rustling. The problem with some of the leaders is that they are politicising issues to do with insecurity to achieve their selfish ends. The crackdown on bandits along the Kerio valley has been intensified by a special security group. Those criticising the CS have not demonstrated their seriousness in any way in the fight against insecurity in the region. Wanyama Wanyama

PUBLIC OFFICE

Leaders should focus on serving, not personal gain

In recent years, politicians have been flaunting their wealth. Many people are in leadership positions for the wrong reasons. Instead of taking up leadership roles to serve the people, they are busy feathering their own nests. Despite our economic struggles, Members of Parliament are among the most well paid leaders in the world. No wonder then that getting into leadership is a life and death affair among Kenyan politicians. Many people are running for public offices just to enrich themselves.

In order to enhance goodwill among the people who administer public offices, it is prudent for us to either reduce their benefits or make it voluntary altogether. President Ibrahim Traore of Burkina Faso and President Donald Trump of United States of America are exemplary leaders who have refused to receive payment for public service and channeled the money to other noble courses. As Kenyans thirst for change, it might be prudent for us to review what public service really means in order to usher in a new era of leaders ready to serve, not earn. Collins Nyongesa, Kitale

Employers oppose extending VAT refunds processing time

► Federation of Kenya Employers says proposal in Finance Bill, 2025 to increase period from 90 to 120 days would compromise members' cash flows.

► Lobby, however, lauds proposal to increase the daily allowable subsistence allowance from Sh2,000 to Sh10,000.

GRAHAM KAJILWA, NAIROBI

Employers have identified the proposal to extend the period taken to pay tax refunds as the most contentious clause in the Finance Bill, 2025 even as they noted some progressive elements in the government's spending plan in the upcoming financial year.

The Federation of Kenya Employers (FKE) on Wednesday said the proposal would deny businesses the much-needed cash flow as they also questioned the five-year cap on deductibility of tax losses.

The lobby at the same time took issue with the removal of the 15 per cent corporate income tax incentive for motor vehicle assemblers.

FKE Executive Director and Chief Executive Jacqueline Mugo said removing the corporate tax incentive would undermine local manufacturing.

She, however, lauded the proposal to increase the daily allowable subsistence allowance from Sh2,000 to Sh10,000, describing it as a progressive and positive step towards supporting business-related travel.

"We have always been concerned that business travel, specifically the daily sustenance allowance, was exposed to taxation and therefore reducing what was available to employees," said Ms Mugo.

As currently contained in the Income Tax Act, any amount above Sh2,000 is subjected to tax, reducing the disposable income of employees.

Treasury has proposed to increase the period of tax refunds from 90 to 120 days, whose implementation will also see the period of auditing extend to 180 days.

"This, in our view, is a regressive step that could severely strain business cash flows," said Ms Mugo.

Tax refunds have been a pain point for businesses even after the government allowed the netting off of liabilities owed by the Kenya Revenue Authority (KRA).

Data from the National Treasury shows revenue from VAT dropped in the year ended March 2025 by 2.1 per cent to Sh471.0 billion, which the Principal Secretary Dr Chris Kiptoo explained is because of the net-off on refunds for those with tax liabilities.

The Federation of Kenya Employers (FKE) Executive Director Jacqueline Mugo briefs the press during the lobby's 66th Annual General Meeting in Nairobi yesterday. [Collins Oduor, Standard]

Ms Mugo said employers have also expressed serious concern over the proposal to grant KRA access to trade secrets and personal data for integration into the electronic tax management system.

"This raises significant concerns around privacy and confidentiality," she said.

Ms Mugo, flanked by FKE President Dr Gilda Odera and FKE Board members, spoke after the lobby's 66th Annual General Meeting in Nairobi.

The AGM saw the election of new board members – Nation Media Group CEO Geoffrey Odundo, Chief Executive Credit Bank Betty Korir, Del Monte MD Wayne Cook and British American Tobacco (BAT) MD Crispin Achola.

Dr Odera pointed out how Kenya is losing its competitiveness to neighbouring markets due to an unpredictable policy environment, frequent regulatory changes, a shrinking market, and erosion of trust in public institutions.

She referenced the 2024 World Citizenship Report that ranked Rwanda, Uganda and Tanzania as more attractive destinations for high-net-worth individuals than Kenya. This, she said, speaks volumes on the growing concerns about Kenya's investment climate.

"We know that Kenya has always been at the top," she said.

Dr Odera noted how the country's job market has also been adversely affected, with increasing redundancies driven by rising labour costs linked to wage adjustments and statutory deductions and levies such as the 1.5 Affordable Housing Levy and the 2.5 per cent Social Health Insurance Fund (Shif).

"Frequent regulatory changes have made long-term business planning challenging. Moreover, the erosion of trust in government institutions has posed a significant risk to economic stability and calls for urgent attention now," she said.

TransCentury swings back to profitability

Kibaki-era infrastructure firm TransCentury has emerged from loss-making and reported a Sh580 million profit after tax in the year to December 2024, from a loss of Sh3.2 billion in 2023.

It is the first time that the firm has reported a full-year profit since 2013, when it reported a Sh2.28 billion loss.

The Nairobi Securities Exchange (NSE)-listed firm attributed the turnaround to sustained revenue growth momentum, margin expansion, cost containment, balance sheet clean-up, and prudent foreign currency exposure management.

TransCentury Group Chairman Shaka Kariuki said last year marked a defining chapter in the company's turnaround journey, adding that the company had taken decisive actions that have since yielded fruits.

"Our stakeholders have been supportive and patient in our turnaround journey, and we assure them that we are actively working to resolve outstanding debt issues with our main lender amicably positioning the business for sustainable growth," said Mr Kariuki.

TransCentury's return to profitability comes after a period of significant challenges, including financial difficulties, operational setbacks and adverse market conditions such as a slump in infrastructure sectors that it had been eyeing to steer its growth, leading to a prolonged loss-making period.

In 2024, the firm reported a revenue of Sh6.69 billion, up from Sh6.57 billion in 2023. TransCentury said its revenue growth continues to be driven by strong brand positioning, steady demand across core business segments, and capital allocation prioritisation to demand fulfilment as well as market deepening initiatives.

According to TransCentury Group CEO Ng'ang'a Njiinu, the return to profitability was despite a tough operating environment.

"Our teams have delivered this remarkable turnaround in an incredibly challenging environment and significant headwinds in the past few years," he said.

"The return to profitability is not just a financial milestone but also a testament to the resilience of our people and business, the robustness of our strategy and our unwavering commitment to sustainable value creation."

"Our next steps are focused on capitalising on the significant growth opportunities we have created to scale up, capital structure optimisation and continued balance sheet improvement."

The group's gross profit increased by 27 per cent as a result of gross margin improvement driven by a focus on high-margin products, improved procurement and efficient project management. [Macharia Kamau]

FINANCE BILL

Women MPs call for credible tax policy to improve public trust

Kenya's tax system has limited trust and support from taxpayers, leading to low compliance levels, submissions to the National Assembly Finance Committee say.

According to a memorandum prepared by the Institute of Public Finance (IPF) in partnership with the Kenya Women Parliamentary Association (Kewopa) has indicated that, as much as Kenyans recognise the importance of taxes in funding public services, they remain uncertain whether new tax measures will lead to tangible improvements in service delivery.

This, they said, calls for credible, evidence-based policy decisions, adding that both the National Tax Policy and the Medium-Term Revenue Strategy (MTRS) emphasise the importance of using regular studies to guide tax reforms and legislation.

"The government on the MTRS had committed to conducting studies and review on implementation of rental income tax regime, tax exemptions and reliefs, implementation of a minimum tax, review personal income tax band, optimal taxation of petroleum products, tax structure of alcoholic and tobacco products, carbon taxation, and develop a tax expenditure framework to guide granting, monitoring and evaluation of tax incentives," the document says.

It says that some measures in the Finance Bill, 2025 are welcome, such as the clean-up of the Value Added Tax (VAT) Act, and proposal to increase the tax-free per diem from Sh2,000 to Sh10,000 per day that will enhance employees' take-home pay.

Kewopa and IPF also say expanding the personal income tax deduction to cover interest on loans used for constructing residential houses, rather than limiting it to the purchase or improvement of such houses, is commendable.

They have also commended National Treasury for shifting focus away from introducing new tax measures and instead concentrating on improving tax administration, even though several proposals in the Bill remain contentious.

These include repeal of key data protection provisions, which would allow the Kenya Revenue Authority (KRA) to access personal data and trade secrets held by businesses raising significant privacy and confidentiality concerns.

"The proposed extension of VAT refund timelines from 90 to 120 days for standard applications, and from 120 to 180 days for cases requiring audits, could severely strain business cash flows and erode trust in the tax refund system.

PUBLIC NOTICE

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC FOR THE PROPOSED RESIDENTIAL DEVELOPMENT ON PARCEL LR NUMBER: 1870/III/319, ALONG SCHOOL LANE, NAIROBI COUNTY

Pursuant to regulation 17 of the environmental management and coordination (Impact Assessment and Audit) Regulations, 2003, the proponent, Lakaza Africa Limited proposes to develop 264 residential units comprising of studios and one bedroom units on parcel LR Number: 1870/III/319, Along School Lane, Nairobi County

The following are the anticipated impacts and proposed mitigation measures and anticipated benefits of the project.

POSSIBLE IMPACTS	MITIGATION MEASURES
Soil erosion	Control earthworks; Install drainage structures properly; Ensure management of excavation activities
Loss of Vegetation	Restore/re-establish vegetation in some parts of the disturbed areas through implementation landscaping program
Air pollution	All trucks and any other mode of hauling soil sand and other loose materials to and from site should be covered. Sprinkling water on dry soils in excavated areas, pavements. Use of clean fuels for machines and equipment. Stockpiles of earth should be sprayed with water or covered during dry seasons; Provide dust masks for the personnel in dust generation areas; Sensitize construction workers on pollution control measures
Emission of greenhouse gas emission	Installation of a solar PV system and/or Implementation of energy efficiency mechanisms to supplement Kenya Power supply and reduce energy consumption thereby abating about GHG emissions. Undertaking annual energy audits to monitor progress and exploit opportunities for energy efficiency
Fire risks	Install fire alarm with smoke sensors; Have standby fire extinguishers at the site in case fire erupts; Declare places with flammable construction materials as "NO SMOKING ZONES" and display conspicuous notices of the same.
Traffic disruption	Properly plan for transportation of materials to ensure that vehicles are optimally filled to reduce the number of trips done or the number of vehicles on the access roads; Employment of formal flagmen/women to ensure the public safety; Place clear signage's at the gate to alert drivers to be cautious about the construction and to look out for entering and/or exiting vehicles.
Noise pollution	Sensitize workforce including drivers of construction vehicles; Install sound barriers for pile driving activity; Install portable barriers to shield compressors and other small stationary equipment where necessary; Display signs to indicate construction activities; Maintain all equipment; Workers in the vicinity of high-level noise to wear safety and protective gear. Work within NEMA stipulated hours.
Occupational Safety & Health	All workers and workers and visitors on site to use mandatory protective gear. Unattended entry to the project site to be restricted. Use of efficient and well-maintained machines to lift and transfer materials. Removal of all dangerous materials that may pose a threat such as metal bars, wires, glass and broken equipment. Availability of fully equipped first aid kits to help address emergencies. Warning signs to all users and visitors be placed at appropriate places. Educate construction workers and tenants on health and safety risks and their prevention.
Public health and occupational safety	Train staff/ workers on occupational health and safety. Provide full protective gear& workmen's compensation cover in addition to the right tools and operational instructions. Design of sewerage system should be as provided in the plans and should be constructed to approved size and design, standard and of approved materials. Avoid undesirable, substandard hazardous or unauthorized materials during construction and maintenance.
Contribution to Climate change	Water management; Invest in water management strategies like rainwater harvesting, storage facilities, and efficient water use practices. These measures aim to mitigate water scarcity during dry periods and reduce flood risks during heavy rainfall events. Infrastructure Design: Incorporate resilient features to withstand extreme weather like flooding, storms, and high temperatures. Energy Efficiency: Implement technologies and practices to reduce greenhouse gas emissions and dependency on fossil fuels. Biodiversity Conservation: Protect and enhance natural ecosystems to preserve biodiversity and ecosystem services, including reforestation, habitat restoration, and sustainable land management practices.
Insecurity and social impacts	Provision of security guards, CCTV cameras, security lights and other security apparatus during the entire project cycle. Adhere to work timings in line with the NEMA licensing conditions.
Increased Water Use	Installation of motion-sensing taps, urinals, and toilets to automatically switch off once the user leaves the station. A motion sensor tap would cut up to 85% of annual water usage compared to conventional taps. Rainwater harvesting: The harvested water would be used for cleaning, flushing toilets, watering plants, etc. Avail storage tanks.
Increased Generation of Waste	Build construction workers' capacity on sanitation and hygiene practises. Segregation of waste at the source during the project cycle. Special attention shall be paid to the sanitary facilities on site; Garbage shall be disposed periodically. Contract a NEMA licensed waste handler
ANTICIPATED PROJECT BENEFITS
Employment	The proposed project will provide direct and indirect job opportunities to a significant number of the population during construction and occupational phases thus reducing the unemployment and in the process provide livelihood
Optimal utilization of the land	The proposed site has been with few apartments for some time but the proposed project shall accommodate more families thus raising the utility of the land. The proposed use also conforms to the area's land use and is not unique in the general Westlands area
Provision of housing and income generation	Housing is a basic good and a major contributor to productivity. Supply of standard and affordable housing has always lagged behind demand for the same and the proposed project has a contribution towards reduction of the deficit.
Improved economy	The use of locally available materials during the construction phase including cement, concrete and ceramic tiles, timber, sand, ballast electrical cables etc., It will contribute towards growth of the economy by contributing to the cash circulation.
Market for Supply of Building Materials	The project will require supply of large quantities of building materials most of which will be sourced locally in within Nairobi and the surrounding areas. This provides ready market for building material suppliers such as quarrying companies and hardware shops.
Improvement of the Informal Sector	The proposed development will help improve the informal sector in securing some temporary revenue and hence improve their livelihood.
Creation of market for goods and services for secondary businesses	The proposed project shall consume various materials during construction such as stones, cement, sand, glass, steel products, wood products, PVC products, ceramic products etc. Those doing commercial activities in the neighborhood shall also have their market widened by the occupants and workers.
Increased government revenue	The proposed project shall generate tax revenue for the government directly and indirectly

DISCLOSURE ON THE NAIROBI-NAKURU-MAU SUMMIT (A8 HIGHWAY) AND RIRONI – MAAI MAHIU – NAIVASHA (A8 SOUTH) PPP ROAD PROJECT:

A: BACKGROUND:

The Kenya National Highways Authority (KeNHA) is a statutory body established under the Kenya Roads Act of 2007 and inaugurated in September 2008. The Authority's mandate is to manage, develop, rehabilitate, and maintain national trunk roads, comprising of Class S, A, and B roads as detailed below:

- Class S: A Highway that connects two or more cities and carries safely large volume of traffic at the highest speed of operation; Total - 40 Kilometers (All Paved)
- Class A: A Highway that forms a strategic route and corridor connecting international boundaries at identified immigration entry and exit points and international terminals such as international air or sea ports; Total - 6,830 Kilometers (Paved 4,975 KMs, Unpaved 1,855 KMs)
- Class B: A Highway that forms an important national route linking national trading or economic hubs, County Headquarters and other nationally important centers to each other and to the National Capital or to Class A roads. Total - 14,713 Kilometers (Paved 7,202 KMs, Unpaved 7,511 KMs)

The PPP Act 2021 allows the private sector to participate in the design, financing, construction, equipping, operations and maintenance and transfer of infrastructure. Section 25 (1) enables a national government contracting authority to prepare a list of projects that it intends to undertake on a priority basis under the Act and submit it to the Directorate for approval. The Kenya National Highways Authority seeks to undertake the Design, Build, Finance, Operate, Maintain and Transfer of Nairobi - Nakuru - Mau Summit (A8) and Rironi - Maai Mahiu - Naivasha (A8 South) Road under the PPP framework and submits it to the PPP Directorate for consideration.

1.1 Statement of the Problem:

The existing Nairobi - Nakuru - Mau Summit (A8) and Rironi - Maai Mahiu - Naivasha (A8 South) Road has been marred by several constraints including congestion (especially during festive periods and holidays) and safety concerns arising from design issues, driver behavior and climatic conditions. The Ministry of Roads & Transport has prioritized the need to alleviate these concerns to safeguard the lives of and enhance the service delivery for the Kenyan people through the expansion of the Project Road. The Project Road traverses the counties of Kiambu, Nyandarua and Nakuru. The proposed development will commence in Rironi to Nakuru and terminate at Mau Summit. The project involves dualling the carriageway, and tolling under a DBFOMT model.

1.2 Prerequisite Conditions:

The proposed road project is contained within the country's vision blueprint of Kenya Vision 2030 as it supports the national vision to improve infrastructure for economic transformation and enhanced competitiveness. Section 25(2) and 66(2) of the PPP Act, 2021 require that a Contracting Authority only submit a project, which is part of the national development agenda and within its legal mandate. Further the Project aligns with the specific target under the Medium-Term Plan IV (2023–2027) for which KeNHA is contributing directly to include:

- Construction of 6,000 km of roads
- Urban and Highway Roads Maintenance
- Construction of footbridges
- Development of a 50-year Trunk Road Investment Plan
- Road Safety projects
- Decongesting of Highways

In line with the Contracting Authority's (KeNHA) mandate to manage, develop, maintain and rehabilitate national trunk roads, comprising of Class S, A, and B roads, the Project Road, Nairobi - Nakuru - Mau Summit (A8) and Rironi - Maai Mahiu - Naivasha (A8 South) Road, is a Class A road and aligns with KeNHA's Strategic Plan 2023-2027. Under this limb, the Authority targets to construct 2,349 Km of roads. This comprises of 1,183 Km of new road construction, capacity enhancement of 647 Km and rehabilitation of 492 Km. This therefore links to the following KeNHA's Strategic goals: -

- Provision of adequate infrastructure that meets stakeholder needs.
- Ensuring that the road network maintains its functionality and durability.
- Increase of effectiveness and efficiency in operations.
- Enhancement of environmental and social sustainability.
- Improvement of organizational capability in development and management of National Trunk Roads.

Contracting Authority:	The Kenya National Highways Authority (KeNHA)
Project Location:	The project road traverses the counties of Kiambu, Nyandarua and Nakuru.
Sector:	Transport
Project Category:	Road(s)
Project Overview:	The proposed development will involve the upgrade, dualling and expansion of the Rironi- Nakuru -Mau Summit (A8) Road section and Rironi – Maai Mahiu – Naivasha (A8 South) to pave way for tolling under a DBFOMT model. The total project road covers an estimated length of 233 kilometers. The A8 road section is part of the Trans-African Highway (Northern Corridor) that connects Kenya to Uganda. The route experiences heavy traffic due to the movement of goods and people, playing a vital role in trade and regional connectivity within East Africa. Given the fiscal constraints in Kenya, the PPP model allows for leveraging private sector expertise and resources to deliver critical infrastructure projects. This approach also ensures efficient project execution and long-term sustainability.
Project Duration:	A maximum of Thirty (30) Years as provided for under the PPP Act, 2021. (The final Term shall be as determined in the evaluation and negotiations culminating in the Project Agreement to be signed by the Parties.)
Key features/Outputs:	The project is a brownfield project that will involve the upgrade, dualling and expansion of the Rironi- Nakuru -Mau Summit Road (175km) and rehabilitation of the 58 km A8 South between Rironi and Naivasha via Maai Mahiu, to pave way for tolling under a DBFOMT model. The Government of Kenya (GoK), through the National Treasury carried out feasibility study for the Nairobi - Nakuru - Mau Summit Road in 2016. The study assessed the project's viability based on traffic demand, environmental impact, economic benefits, legal, financial, and technical feasibility and recommended implementation of the project on a PPP framework. In light of various factors, including changes in traffic patterns, project scope, risk reallocation, macroeconomic shifts, environmental and regulatory requirements, KeNHA has updated the 2016 feasibility study for the project road. The expected outputs will be determined during the feasibility study which include: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Optimum route alignment</li> <li>Detailed technical design and tolling strategy</li> <li>Financial and economic analysis</li> <li>Recommended PPP structure</li> <li>Optimal Risk Allocation structure</li> </ol>
Output Specifications:	The project aims to meet the following objectives: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Improved road service levels to accommodate high traffic volumes efficiently.</li> <li>Enhanced connectivity, reduced travel time and vehicle operating costs along the Northern Corridor.</li> <li>Regional trade promotion by improving the transportation of goods and services.</li> <li>Enhanced road safety by widening the carriageway and upgrading road infrastructure.</li> <li>Economic growth support by connecting key towns and centers of economic importance.</li> </ul>
Payment Mechanism:	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>User-pays</li> </ul> The Toll rates shall be determined in line with the National Tolling Policy (when approved). Escalation of toll rates shall be done as per the Policy.
Proposed Contractual Structure (as per section 21 and the Second Schedule of the PPP Act, 2021)	DBFOMT model. Under this model, the private sector partner will be responsible for the design, financing, construction, operation, and maintenance of the road infrastructure and associated facilities for a defined period of 30 years, after which the road will be transferred to the public sector.
Advisors	Road sector players such as the Office of the Attorney General, Ministry of Roads & Transport, The National Treasury, State Department of Roads, Kenya Roads Board, National Transport and Safety Authority, National Police Service, Insurance Regulatory Authority (IRA), National Environmental Management Authority, Selected National Toll Operator, Transaction Advisors.

DISCLOSURE ON THE NAIROBI-NAKURU-MAU SUMMIT (A8 HIGHWAY) AND RIRONI – MAAI MAHIU – NAIVASHA (A8 SOUTH) PPP ROAD PROJECT:

C: DISCLOSURE REQUIREMENTS ON THE SUBMISSION OF TWO (2) PRIVATELY-INITIATED PROPOSALS SUBMITTED TO KeNHA:

Two Proponents have submitted proposals relating to the Nairobi-Nakuru-Mau Summit and Rironi - Maai Mahiu - Naivasha (A8 South) Road Project (the Project) as follows:

- Proponent 1: China Road and Bridge Corporation Kenya (CRBC) and National Social Security Fund (NSSF) Consortium
- Proponent 2 : Shandong Hi Speed Road & Bridge International Engineering Co. Ltd

The Privately Initiated Proposals will be subjected to the PPP procurement process which entails: evaluation of proposals, project development activities, evaluation of the project development report, negotiations and drafting of the project agreement, stakeholder engagements and finally obtaining requisite approvals required under the PPP Act, 2021. Having undertaken the above processes, the PPP Committee will render its decision to KeNHA in accordance with the Act. KeNHA will endeavor to abide by the provisions of Section 69 of the PPP Act which requires a Contracting Authority (CA) to publish information relating to the projects upon award. This will be disclosed at the appropriate time upon conclusion of the statutory processes..

D: SALIENT PROJECT DETAILS:

1.	Project Benefits:	<ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>Traffic flow efficiency (vehicles per hour)</li><li>Road surface quality index</li><li>Safety metrics (accident rates, response time for incidents)</li><li>Toll revenue collection (for financial sustainability)</li><li>Compliance with service level agreements</li></ul>
2.	Project Labour Benefits:	The PIPs shall be evaluated in line with the local content requirements under the provisions of the PPP Act, 2021. Kenya has skilled labor in road construction, with supplementary expertise being provided by the Proponent. ## US halts students visa processing in new swipe at foreign applicants

- ▶ Japan and China urge local universities to accept foreign students from US varsities.
- ▶ Harvard University students protest President Trump's move on student visas.

AFP, CAMBRIDGE

The US State Department on Tuesday suspension of student visa processing, as President Donald Trump's administration seeks unprecedented control of the nation's universities by slashing funding and curbing international enrollment.

It is the latest escalation in the White House's crackdown on foreign students, which has seen it revoke visas and deport some involved in protests against the war in Gaza.

A cable signed by Secretary of State Marco Rubio and seen by AFP orders embassies and consulates not to allow "any additional student or exchange visa... appointment capacity until further guidance is issued."

The government plans to ramp up vetting of social media profiles of international applicants to US universities, the cable said. The New York Times reported that the suspension of interviews with visa applicants was temporary.

Rubio earlier rescinded hundreds of visas and the Trump administration has moved to bar Harvard University from admitting non-Americans.

Japan and Hong Kong have urged local universities to accept foreign students from US universities in light of the crackdown. China's foreign ministry spokeswoman Mao Ning on Wednesday said Beijing urged Washington to "safeguard the legitimate rights and interests of international students, including those from China."

Hundreds of thousands of Chinese students attend US universities, long viewed by many in China as beacons of academic freedom and rigour.

Protests at Harvard

The suspension of visa processing came as Harvard students protested on Tuesday after the government said it intended to cancel all remaining financial contracts, Trump's latest attempt to force the institution submit to unprecedented oversight.

A judge issued a restraining order pending a hearing on the matter scheduled for Thursday, the same day as the university's commencement graduation ceremony for which thousands of graduating students and their families had gathered in Cambridge, Massachusetts near Boston.

The White House, meanwhile, doubled down in its offensive, saying public money should go to vocational schools that train electricians and plumbers. "The president is more interested in giving that taxpayer money to trade schools and programs and state schools where they are promoting American values, but most importantly, educating the next generation based on skills that we need"

in our economy and our society," Karoline Leavitt said on Fox News Tuesday evening. "We need more of those in our country, and less LGBTQ graduate majors from Harvard University."

Tuesday's protest unfolded as news helicopters hovered overhead and graduating students in academic attire and their guests ate finger food at a reception on the lawns of Harvard Square nearby.

"All my international friends and peers and professors and researchers are at risk and (are) threatened with being deported -- or their option is to transfer" to another university, said Alice Goyer, who attended the protest wearing a black academic gown.

One history of medicine student from Britain graduating this week who gave his name only as Jack said that the policies pursued by Trump would make US universities less attractive to international students. "I don't know if I'd pursue a PhD here, six years is a long time," he said.

Harvard itself has filed extensive legal challenges against Trump's measures, which legal experts say are likely to be overturned by the courts.

Separately, alumni plan to file a lawsuit against Trump on June 9, filmmaker Anurima Bhargava told a virtual meeting staged by Crimson Courage, a grassroots alumni group that held a mass webinar to raise awareness and a fighting fund from former students.

The cutting of contracts announced Tuesday -- estimated by US media to be worth $100 million -- would mark the slashing of business ties between the government and the country's oldest university. Amid a broad campaign against seats of learning that Trump accuses of being hotbeds of liberal bias and anti-Semitism, the president has singled out Harvard.

In the last few weeks, the elite educational and research powerhouse has seen billions of dollars in federal grants frozen and millions of dollars of federal contracts torn up.

The university has sued both to block the revocation of its right to recruit and sponsor foreign students, 27 percent of its total roll, as well as to overturn the withdrawal of federal funding.

A legal expert suggested Harvard could file a lawsuit to overturn the latest contract cuts as part of existing legal action. "The case is so strong that the court system is not going to step to the side and allow this... to go forward," said Albany Law School professor Ray Brescia.

He said the Trump administration's assault on Harvard was so flawed that a higher court would likely strike down the campaign if the Trump administration were to challenge it on appeal.

On Monday, Trump nonetheless vowed he would prevail in the increasingly public struggle, claiming that foreign students at Harvard include "radicalized lunatics, troublemakers."

Briefing

SOUTH SUDAN. S SUDAN LAUNCHES KEY VACCINES

■ South Sudan, in partnership with United Nations agencies, have launched two vaccines to prevent pneumonia and severe diarrhea in children. Anin Ngot Ngot Mou, undersecretary in the Ministry of Health, described the rollout as a game changer in the fight against child mortality. "Today, we are taking a bold step forward in protecting the health and future of our children in South Sudan. Pneumococcal disease is the leading cause of pneumonia, meningitis, and sepsis, especially among children under five years old," Ngot said during the launch in Juba. [Xinhua]

NIGERIA. PRESIDENT TO RECOVER LOOTED ASSETS

■ President Bola Tinubu has vowed to ensure all stolen funds and assets belonging to the West African country would be recovered. In a speech delivered on his behalf by Nadungu Gagare, a permanent secretary of political and economic affairs, at the opening of a National Summit on Asset Recovery in Abuja, the Nigerian capital, Tinubu said asset recovery is a vital tool in the country's anti-corruption strategy. "Recovering stolen public funds and channeling them toward development represents justice. It is about restoring the people's trust," the speech read. [Xinhua]

SUDAN. CRISIS DEEPENS AS FIGHTING ESCALATES

■ The humanitarian crisis is deepening as fighting, displacement and health emergencies fuel needs, the world body warned. In North Darfur state, artillery shelling continues to affect residential areas of El Fasher city and Abu Shouk camp for internally displaced people. Daily civilian casualties are reported, and recent days have seen an intensification of nighttime bombardments, said the UN Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs. Humanitarian partners on the ground report that access to education remains constrained in North Darfur. [Xinhua]

HOROSCOPE

Virgo – Aug 23-Sep 22
Verbalizing your thoughts on paper, device, or orally can be particularly useful, bringing plan to life and helping you make a decision or understand things more fully. Your powers of reasoning are mighty right now, and there can be meaningful conversations or communications occurring that help you turn a corner.

Libra – Sep 23-Oct 22
There can be a real buzz of ideas with you today, and blanks fill in, or an important piece of information can arrive that completes a picture. It's helpful to remember that while conversations can be interesting right now, an emotional or sensitive element could be missing.

Scorpio – Oct 23-Nov 21
It's not so much a time for deep connections as it's suitable for looking at deeper issues with more objectivity and reason. In fact, detaching yourself just enough from emotions can be beneficial from time to time, and this exercise is valuable today.

Sagittarius Nov 22-Dec 21
Some emotional detachment can be pretty pleasant and immensely helpful now. There may be new clarity or a turning point in a relationship, and you're zeroing in on what's fair, balanced, and useful.

Capricorn – Dec 22-Jan 19
This is an excellent time to fill in the blanks or details. You're in fine shape for making plans and lists, editing, refining, and talking things through with co-workers or people with whom you spend a lot of time. Giving voice to your thoughts and ideas or even writing or typing them out can help you see things more clearly and objectively.

Aquarius – Jan 20-Feb 18
Observations you make now are likely to be significant, and assessing recent ideas can be very successful. You can find yourself more and more engaged on a mental level, and you are articulate and feeling more dramatic right now. You might thoroughly enjoy entertaining others with your conversation.

Pisces – Feb 19-Mar 20
Analyzing emotional issues can sometimes take you away from your feelings a little too far, but today, it can be a useful exercise. Significant ideas, news, or conversations can emerge now.

Aries – Mar 21-Apr 19
You're in a particularly good position to sort things out and solve problems or gain some clarity on your studies, trips, or projects as new details emerge. Significant decisions can result from today's conversations. This is also a beautiful time for creative writing or romantic expression.

Taurus – Apr 20-May 20
The day will likely shape up in bright, illuminating ways. Minor ups and downs or mental wavering can become solid, happy decisions. This is especially the case regarding money matters and practical affairs, with the Sun and Mercury heading toward an alignment in your resources sector.

Gemini – May 21-Jun 21
It's an especially good time for communicating and connecting in ways that really get you places. Verbalizing your desires can be in sharp focus. You can experience important realizations, epiphanies, and clarifications. An idea comes into full bloom, or the information you've been waiting for arrives.

Cancer – Jun 22-Jul 22
Revealing conversations or details emerging can prompt a turning point of sorts now. You may be in a better position to communicate or rationalize a matter that, before today, was difficult to express or understand. An inkling of a plan or idea around late March may now blossom.

Leo – Jul 23-Aug 22
Today is helpful for seeing a plan or friendship with greater clarity, although there can be some confusion leading up to this. Friends have something important to contribute or say right now, and the full details of a plan may be born. You might also play with emerging ideas for long-term ventures and projects.

The making of Nairobi as a hub for global professionals

Even as some organisations are forced to cut local operations due to funding cuts back home, others are shifting their bases to Nairobi.

By Peter Muiruri
pmuiruri@standardmedia.co.ke

As global corporations expand their presence in order to strengthen local operations, property developers and investors in Nairobi's real estate are seizing the opportunity to cater to an increasingly diverse and affluent expatriate community.

The trend follows Nairobi's position as a hub for international businesses, including the presence of the United Nations Office, the only such UN office operating within the Global South. All these attract expatriates from around the world.

Recently, the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) announced plans to relocate almost a quarter of its New York-based workforce to Nairobi.

The move will involve the integration of the current Policy and Strategy Division and the current Technical Division into a Programme Division largely based in Nairobi and the relocation of the Independent Evaluation Office to Nairobi.

URBANISATION

Nairobi rise as global professionals hub

Nairobi began in March this year and is poised to continue through to September.

"We've merged our programme and technical divisions and are locating most of the new divisions in Nairobi—about 100 positions in total. I believe that's about a quarter of our (headquarters staff). This move has been in the works for a couple of years," says Eddie Wright, a media specialist at UNFPA.

Information relayed by the UN body shows the relocation to Nairobi will bring the organisation's services closer to where they are needed most, "in terms of geography or time zone," with corresponding support systems.

Nairobi, UNFPA says, was selected after a rigorous process that compared the city with other duty stations around the world based on criteria "such as staff safety and security, staff experience, UN presence, geographical accessibility, talent availability, and infrastructure".

Nairobi's luxury apartments, gated communities, and commercial spaces are part of the requisite infrastructure that meets the evolving needs of such global professionals.

While the top leadership within such organisations prefer high-end estates such as Muthaiga, Runda, and the diplomatic node of Gigiri, other cadres of expatriates can be found in Kilimani and Lavington, estates whose skyline continues to evolve.

The demand for such premium apartments, gated communities, or serviced residences leads to rising property values in these areas, with property developers and landlords adapting to expatriate expectations. Usually, supporting amenities preferred by the foreign workforce include gyms, coworking spaces, concierge services and restaurants serving exotic cuisine.

A July 2024 report by Knight Frank shows that Kenya's prime residential market remains resilient, with rents registering a five per cent increase over the previous 12 months, thus underpinning the demand for high-end rental properties.

According to the report, rent for a three-bedroom apartment stands at between $900-1,400 (Sh120,000-185,000) per month, while rent for four- and five-bedroom houses vacillates between $2,000-4,000 (Sh265,000-Sh530,000) per month depending on location "and the perceived exclusivity of the neighbourhood."

Knight Frank Managing Director Mark Dunford says the type of housing such expatriates look for depends on the level of seniority of the individuals moving in.

In any case, says Dunford, the salary and other benefits, such as housing allowances, provided by their agency will define what they can afford, adding that workers at large foreign organisations or agencies normally occupy properties at the higher end of what the market has to offer.

"Nairobi has a large and growing supply of high-end housing that would attract expatriates," he says. "The city will have no issue

NAIROBI NEIGHBOURHOODS POPULAR WITH EXPATRIATES, DIPLOMATS, AND UN WORKERS

Gigiri – This is where the United Nations Office at Nairobi is located, along with various embassies. It offers secure living, international schools, and easy access to Village Market mall.

Runda – A gated residential area near Gigiri, known for its spacious homes and serene environment. It is favoured by diplomats and senior international staff.

Karen – Offers large homes with gardens, privacy, and a more suburban lifestyle. It is ideal for families with access to international schools, shopping malls, and recreational spaces.

Lavington and Kileleshwa – The areas have a mix of standalone homes and high-end apartments, centrally located and close to major business hubs.

Westlands and Riverside – Popular for young professionals due to proximity to offices, restaurants, and nightlife.

Muthaiga – One of Nairobi's oldest and most exclusive neighbourhoods, known for its high security, prestige, and proximity to both Nairobi's CBD and UN complex.

absorbing 100 or so individuals coming into the market.”

While his organisation does not get involved in the actual legal elements of rental agreements with incoming expatriates, it does provide commercial advice and assists with negotiations to ensure an equitable agreement between landlord and tenant.

Dunford says currently, Nairobi has a number of schools offering international curriculums across the different city nodes that should take in extended family members in need of schooling.

In terms of quality lifestyle, Dunford says Nairobi's commercial scene is no different now from that in developed countries in terms of shopping.

"There is access to a variety of local and imported goods through a diverse retail offering, food and beverage options, as well as the best airlift on the continent offered by international airlines via Jomo Kenyatta Airport," he says.

Daniel Ojijo, the executive chairman of Homes Universal Ltd, says apart from hosting the only UN body in the developing world, Kenya's strategic location and relative stability make it a regional hub for global entities thus positioning it competitively among African cities.

He says the heavy diplomatic presence, where some foreign missions in Nairobi serve multiple countries in the region, has also created a multicultural environment that supports any expatriate transition.

"Nairobi has active expatriate communities and clubs that enhance social life and integration," says Ojijo.

"The city is also supported by reliable infrastructure such as a stable internet, global banking outlets, and transport systems that suit international professionals. Their presence significantly boosts the premium real estate segment and supports overall market growth."

Ojijo says among the benefits of hosting higher rental yields in areas popular with expats are increased property value in neighbourhoods like Runda, Karen, and Gigiri, where demand for such housing remains high.

This, he adds, creates investment opportunities for developers targeting this niche market while encouraging quality construction and world-class standards. Such developments are usually undertaken by reputable builders with modern finishes who include amenities such as gyms, backup power, swimming pools, clubhouses and water storage systems.

"Hosting an expatriate community stimulates related services such as relocation consultants, property management, and interior designers. It also puts pressure on mid-market housing in some areas as land prices increase due to demand for high-end property, creating more earnings for the second-tier market," he says.

As the city continues to develop world-class infrastructure with an ever-evolving social scene, it is well-placed to continue attracting global professionals through its endless lifestyle possibilities.

POLICY

Finance Bill threatens housing, jobs and Investment, warns lobby

Real estate stakeholders have raised concerns over the Finance Bill, 2025 and the National Rating Act, 2024, saying they could choke investment, drive up housing costs, and destabilise an already fragile property sector.

Speaking during a press briefing in Nairobi yesterday, the Treasurer of the Real Estate Stakeholders Association (RESA) Peter Gitau said the proposals in the Bill and the newly enacted Act represent a policy shock that could derail affordable housing efforts and hurt ordinary Kenyans.

The National Rating Act of 2024, assented into law on December 4, 2024, replaces previous legislation concerning property valuation and rating. "These measures, if passed without significant amendments, will make it more expensive to build, buy, or rent a home. The ripple effects will hit everyone—from developers and contractors to families struggling to find decent housing," he said. RESA expressed concerns that the two legislative instruments will not only burden property owners with new taxes but also damage investor confidence and slow down capital inflows. "What we are seeing is a dangerous layering of taxes and compliance obligations that will ultimately hurt the economy. Private capital is already under pressure, and these changes will only push it further away," said Gitau.

The Finance Bill proposes applying standard 16 per cent VAT on previously exempt construction inputs, including materials used in affordable housing. According to Gitau, this could drastically increase the price of homes.

The bill proposes shortening VAT refund timelines and eliminating the ability to offset overpaid taxes. A proposed 0.3 per cent annual property tax on urban residential homes, the lobby argues, will amount to double taxation, as it comes on top of existing county land rates.

RESA says this could trigger rent hikes of up to 25 per cent, and the repeal of investment deductions and preferential corporate tax rates is likely to discourage large-scale projects.

MARKET TRENDS

Trump aid cuts: Expats' exodus leaves pricey suburbs in limbo

Developers are now faced with the choice of lowering rents to local rates or having their properties go empty.

By Graham Kajilwa
gkajilwa@standardmedia.co.ke

One of the advantages of being an investor in high-end property in some of Nairobi's suburbs is the ever-ready clientele from the non-governmental organisation (NGO) space.

But after President Donald Trump announced budget cuts to USAID, the American government's agency for aid-related activities, this market not only witnessed a drop in clients but also in asking prices for units on sale.

USAID is a major funder of NGOs in the country, according to 2023 figures, with its budget for programmes in Kenya standing at $435 million (Sh56.6 billion).

Following the formation of the Department of Government Efficiency, which seeks to reduce wastage both in human resources and funding, USAID may not operate as it used to due to this scrutiny.

This has left investors who sank their money in high-end properties in areas such as Kitisuru, Muthaiga, and Gigiri, popular with the diplomatic and NGO community, in limbo as to how to recoup their investments.

Mark Dunford, chief executive of Knight Frank Kenya, a real estate con-

People protest against the Trump administration's decision to virtually shut down the United States Agency for International Development (USAID) at the US Capitol in Washington, DC, on February 5, 2025. The move has trickled down to aid-dependent countries like Kenya. [AFP]

“USAID has left, but there are still expatriates. You may now need to market your unit more than before, and that is an extra cost that you have to budget for.”

Daniella Nyakuraya, manager,
SIC Housing Unit

sulting firm, says the market needs to shift its focus from the foreign to the domestic market.

It is the only way, he says, developing countries can cope in the wake of President Trump's sweeping changes in government spending.

"The only real way to be defensive against a force like President Trump is to reduce your reliance on foreign aid so you can start depending on the domestic market," he says. He notes that a market like Dubai is built on 95 per cent foreign and five per cent domestic. But European markets are 95 per cent domestic and five per cent foreign.

"So, if you have a disaster in the European market, the domestic market really cannot go anywhere. That will help to mitigate that risk," he told The Standard in a recent interview on the sidelines of the East Africa Property Investment (EAPI) Summit. But when it comes to depending on the domestic market, Daniella Nyakuraya, SIC Housing Unit manager, advises investors to be patient since cash flow will not be the same.

The challenge with having a low-paying tenant is that some of the amenities in the unit may not be as well-maintained as before due to cash constraints.

While this could be commensurate with the amount of rent being paid, it may force the owner to dig deeper into their pockets to keep those amenities running.

"If you are not getting as much rent, you may not do as much as you were doing when you were getting high rent. If you have to repaint every year, then you do not have to. If you have to buy furniture every time a tenant moves out, then you don't have to," she explained.

Ms Nyakuraya noted that an investor can still get the NGO and diplomatic clientele even with the Trump budget cuts but with more marketing, especially if their units had not been in the market for long.

This can be done through partnerships with real estate agents.

"USAID has left, but there are still expatriates. You may now need to market your unit more than before, and that is an extra cost that you have to budget for," she said in an interview.

Additionally, this clientele can be sourced from international firms. The unit owner can opt to give a concession to make the lease more attractive.

There is also the option of converting the property into a short-stay unit.

"The problem with a huge unit (for short stays) is that you need a specific client. It is either a family or a large group, and it is not easy to get," she said.

A recent index by HassConsult, a real estate developer, showed Westlands is one of the areas where property prices have dropped as the effects of President Trump's aid cuts settle in the market.

As prices in satellite areas such as Juja are climbing, leafy suburbs associated with diplomats and workers working with major NGOs or their head offices are dropping.

The index reports that property prices in Nairobi's suburb contracted for a fifth straight quarter in the period, albeit by a slimmer margin of 0.4 per cent compared to 0.8 per cent in the fourth quarter of 2024.

Apartment prices dropped by 13.3 per cent in the last year in Westlands and by 6.6 per cent in the first quarter of 2025. Apartment prices in Riverside dropped by 10.4 per cent, while house prices in Gigiri went down by 7.8 per cent and Kitisuru by 3.8 per cent.

The asking price for apartments in Riverside dropped 5.5 per cent in the quarter, followed by Muthangari (4.6 per cent) and Lavington (2.0 per cent), respectively.

Why Apiculture Enterprises could save the declining bee population

► Laws that limit antibiotics harm to pollinators, and creating more flower-rich habitats will go some distance in protecting the bees.

► Ventures in Bee Products value addition could be the answer to increasing the decreasing bee population

Gerard Nyele, Nairobi.

Pollination is a vital ecosystem function and service. And while it is vital for regulating nature, agriculture, human well-being, and more, pollinators have been drastically declining.

Pesticides and climate change have taken much of the blame for that downward trend.

A new report to mark World Bee Day highlights emerging problems threatening their existence.

The report states that almost 90 per cent of flowering plants and three-quarters of the world's staple crops rely on pollinators.

The report says things like growing crops with more pollen and nectar, laws that limit antibiotics that harm pollinators, transitioning to electric vehicles to cut down on fumes and creating more flower-rich habitats will go some distance in protecting the creatures.

"If the decline in pollinators continues, we are going to see significant food insecurity" Notes the report.

Despite this, globally, honey production reached 1,894 thousand tonnes in 2023, with Africa having the highest growth rate. The continent now accounts for 12 per cent of world production, producing 223,000 tonnes annually.

Moreover, farmers are now embracing more products in the bee products value chain to increase incomes, as well as keep the bees buzzing.

Apart from easily noticeable products like honey, propolis and hives, it may take a guided tour through the expansive display arena to understand other pretty new products in the Kenyan market.

Paul Mutua, the proprietor of Savannah Beekeeping and Equipment Centre in Utawala says "Innovation and research have moved bee products enterprises from not only honey, but other high demand products like pollen-based teas.

Mutua says the diversification has enabled his venture to punch its way to the export market.

"This is the next frontier and easiest way to make money, it's simply because you don't even need to open the beehive for you to harvest the product." He noted during a recent interview.

Bee pollen- a mixture of flower pollen, nectar, enzymes, honey, wax, and bee secretions, is said to have high nutritional value and health benefits. Coupled with increased health awareness occasioned by the emergence of covid 19, these factors have pushed demand for the product.

Mutua says the global bee pollen market is poised for substantial growth between 2024-2032 driven by increasing consumer awareness about natural health supplements, rising demand for organic products, expanding applications across industries, and the reported health benefits.

Internationally, the global bee pollen market is expected to witness significant growth and trends between 2024 and 2032, according to a bee pollen market outlook report 2024-2032 produced recently.

Paul Mutua, proprietor of Savannah Beekeeping and Equipment Centre showcases tea brands achieved through bee products value addition [Gerard Nyele, standard]

The market is expected to grow at a CAGR of 6.9 percent from 2023 to 2032, attributing increasing demand to its consumption as a food additive.

If the decline in pollinators continues, we are going to see significant food insecurity

These market growth projections collaborate with local experts and producers who report an unprecedented surge in demand for the product, fetching premium prices within the global market.

Demonstrating how pollen is harvested, Mutua, a professional estate planner turned bee proprietor explained the process as seamless and most beneficial to farmers as a farmer can harvest pollen every two days.

"Pollen can be easily collected from returning foragers using pollen 'traps.' These traps are placed in front of or underneath the hive entrance and returning foragers walk through a metal or plastic mesh to enter the hive. The mesh is specifically sized so foragers can get through it, but large corbicular pollen loads are scraped off the bees' legs and into collection traps.

Making seven consumable products while using pollen as a raw material are among the products he has focused on.

"We harvest three times a week between 100-200 grams of pollen," he says, noting that the pollen has a special protein not found in meat.

The product, he says, is good for the elderly, lactating mothers and people living with HIV and cancer.

Mutua has partnered with researchers in the Netherlands to explore additional value-added options for his products.

Currently, he is exporting to six countries, with his major market for pollen products being Orman.

"We are partnering with some organizations to bring the technology home. The market is there and that's why we have contracted 7000 farmers to help in collecting the pollen"

Many people are also interested in other valuable bee products, such as royal jelly, propolis, and bee venom.

The company is engaged in capacity-building efforts in the villages to encourage more farmers to take up beekeeping. This, Mutua says will bolster the production of pollen, whose current demand in the international market is skyrocketing.

However, he cautions that the products should not be mistaken for medicine, rather than remedies that help manage health conditions.

He says ventures in bee products value addition could be the answer to increasing the decreasing bee population as farmers will value bees and protect them as they do with their domestic animals.

Electric car financing scheme seeks to boost EV taxi Uptake

GreenMax Capital Group has partnered with Moja EV to pilot an electric vehicle (EV) financing for digital taxi drivers.

Supported by concessional funding from Dutch not-for-profit organisation IKEA Foundation, the initiative aims to make EV ownership more affordable and accessible while cutting carbon emissions.

GreenMax CEO Clifford Aaron said the pilot will initially finance 20 drivers, with the firm absorbing the first-loss risk to attract more financiers into the EV space.

"We're taking on 20 percent of the risk to make the financing package both bankable and affordable," said Aaron during the launch in Nairobi.

Drivers will lease the EVs at significantly reduced daily rates, eventually transitioning to full ownership. Moja EV will handle repossessions in cases of long-term defaults but promises flexibility for drivers facing temporary setbacks such as illness or family emergencies.

Moja EV is contributing 80 per cent of the capital, with Greenmax providing the remaining 20 percent, which includes taking on the initial default risk to encourage inclusive lending.

Moja EV CEO Wang Ai Ping said the pilot is the foundation for a larger $150 million rollout targeting electric Matatus and buses starting in September.

"This model proves that EV financing works, especially for informal sector drivers," said Ping.

He added that earlier EV rollouts were limited by short battery ranges, but new vehicles now cover over 300km per charge, enabling drivers to complete full shifts.

"We've deployed 100 EVs and collected valuable data to scale this model across the country, including for women and youth," he said.

However, Ping criticized the high import taxes on EVs of up to 90 percent, that have nearly doubled the local cost of vehicles. He noted, warning the firm may shift manufacturing to Tanzania or Rwanda if the policy environment doesn't improve.

"We were promised tax waivers for the first 100,000 EVs, but we are now paying 75 percent in duties,"

Ken Shadrack Obuya, Chair of the Drive Electric Group SACCO, welcomed the initiative, calling it a game-changer.

"With Ksh 1,500 worth of electricity, you can drive to Nakuru and back. It's cheaper and eco-friendly," he said.

The stakeholders urged the government to revise EV policies, streamline customs procedures, and expand charging infrastructure to support Kenya's shift toward clean, affordable transport.

Lionesses and Simbas ready to hunt at Rugby Africa Cup

► Simbas head to South Africa for World Cup qualifiers preps.

► Three debutants headline the Lionesses squad for Rugby Africa Cup.

WASHINGTON ONYANGO, KISUMU

National rugby 15s sides Kenya Lionesses and their male counterparts Simbas are ready to dance with the best at the upcoming Rugby Africa Cup after naming their squads for their respective duties set for June.

The highly-charged and physical game required proper preparations, and the Kenya Rugby Union, after narrowly missing out on a World Cup berth in 2023, believes early preparations will give the teams the required lift to win their encounters.

For Lionesses, three debutants headline the selection ahead of Rugby Africa Women's Cup slated for June 1 in Antananarivo, Madagascar.

Ivonee Kantundu, Dorris Kimani and Yvette Oketch, who will be looking to prove themselves after being included in the team that comprises the star fly-half Grace Adhiambo Okulu.

Okulu, who was instrumental during Lionesses' Sevens 2025 World Challenger Series championship run, will be joined by Naomi Amuguni, Sheila Chajira, Christabel Lindo, Faith Livoi, Moreen Muritu, Stella Wafula and Sinaida Mokaya, who all represented Kenya in the shorter version of the game.

The Lionesses are keen to bounce back from a disappointing campaign in last year's tournament, where they managed just one win against Cameroon and suffered defeats to hosts Madagascar and defending champions South Africa.

This year, they will face the same teams: Madagascar and South Africa, alongside regional rivals Uganda, in a round-robin format. The team will kick off their campaign against hosts Madagascar on June 7.

Meanwhile, Simbas tactician Jerome Paarwater believes they have the best team to take Kenya forward ahead of their South Africa one-month high-performance training.

Kenya will use the tour to prepare for the Rugby Africa Cup 2027 Rugby World Cup Qualifiers in Uganda.

With two debutants in the team, the South African team is confident after his side saw off United Arab Emirates rugby side 54-24 last weekend.

"The training match offered us an opportunity to see the work that we've done over the last one week in Kakamega come to life, especially for the players who haven't been in the Simbas set up for the last two years.

"That is why we played the first two groups made up of majorly these players, we were glad to see a number of them raise their hands with their performances," he said.

The 33-man squad is a blend of seasoned Simbas players led by captain George Nyambua, as well as exciting new talents in Samuel Owumu and Collins Indechi.

Kenya Sevens stars Kevin Wekesa, John Okoth, Samuel Asati and Bethwel Anami return to the squad having featured in the 2023 Rugby World Cup qualifiers in France.

"It was important for us to see all 47 players who have been in camp play in a game situation, which is not always possible in a training set up," said Paarwater.

RUGBY

Ex-Shujaa star Mwanja named KCB coach

Former Kenya Sevens star Dennis Mwanja has been appointed the interim coach of KCB Rugby.

The former Kenya Cup champions confirmed Mwanja's new responsibilities, replacing Oliver Mang'eni in a round of changes to the technical bench.

The changes, which took effect on Monday will also see backs coach Darwin Mukidza, and team manager Priscilla Amollo Ong'ombe, leave the club after the expiry of their contracts.

The transitions come at a time when the team is looking to rejuvenate itself ahead of the 2025 National Sevens Circuit starting in July.

KCB RFC chairman James Mugo said they are changing their strategies and planning for the future in the changes after the end of the 2024-2025 season.

"We are looking at continually rebuilding the team to get back to winning ways. The club seeks to continue contributing positively to the game of rugby in Kenya and sustain its position as a top tier playing club. Key to this is having a team that is firing on all cylinders," said Mugo.

"After productive discussions with the coaching team, we have made a painful but aligned decision to make changes in the tech bench.

KCB finished the season trophyless after losing to Menengai Oilers in the Kenya Cup semi-finals and also got knocked out by Kabras Sugar in the Enterprise Cup semis.

Kabras ended the season with a double cup victory after defeating Menengai Oilers in both the Kenya Cup and Enterprise Cup finals.

"The club remains a formidable force in the local rugby scene. Our ambition is to reclaim the Kenya Cup and Enterprise Cup titles as well as to continue churning out players to the national team. With that in mind, we have to ensure that we lay the right foundation for a successful future," Mugo added.

KCB Sevens campaign will be bolstered by the return of Shujaa quartet of Samuel Asati, Floyd Wabwire, Festus Shiasi, and Vincent Onyala. [Washington Onyango]

Briefing

SPAIN. YAMAL SIGNS NEW SIX-YEAR CONTRACT

■ Barcelona's teenage star Lamine Yamal signed a new contract until 2031 with the Catalan giants on Tuesday after a spectacular season. The 17-year-old winger is already one of the club's key players and helped them land a domestic treble of LaLiga, the Copa del Rey and the Spanish Super Cup. "Barcelona and Lamine Yamal have reached a deal to extend his contract to June 30, 2031," said the Catalan club in a statement. "Lamine Yamal's renewal is a demonstration of the solidity of Barca's project. His emergence on to the world football scene is like few others, and it began with his debut on April 29, 2023, still at the age of 15." [AFP]

KENYA. NBA AFRICA UNVEILS NEW COURT

The new basketball court was unveiled at Loiswell Academy in Nairobi. [Courtesy]

■ NBA Africa and Opportunity International have unveiled a new outdoor basketball court at Loiswell Academy in Nairobi, Kenya. The global nonprofit organization develops innovative programs that use financial services, training and support to address some of the challenges facing those living in poverty around the world. The unveiling on Tuesday follows the launch of a new court at Highland School in Nyamata, Rwanda, last week and supports NBA Africa's commitment to build 1,000 courts on the continent over the next decade. # Champs League: PSG see end in sight to quest for holy grail ► Parisian bid to dominate Europe began in 2011, when Qatar Sports Investments bought it.

► French champions go into Saturday's final against Inter Milan as favourites.

AFP, PARIS

It has taken almost 15 years of huge spending by their Qatari owners and an overdue shift away from signing glamorous superstars, but Paris Saint-Germain go into Saturday's Champions League final against Inter Milan as favourites to finally win the coveted trophy for the first time.

A club that for years made a habit of collapsing in spectacular fashion in big Champions League games has been transformed this season as a thrilling young team, brilliantly coached by Luis Enrique, has taken the continent by storm.

Once they might have been ridiculed by football fans around Europe who dismiss their domestic dominance due to the huge financial advantage they enjoy -- PSG have just won their 11th Ligue 1 title in 13 years and eighth French Cup in a decade.

Now, however, they draw admiration from rivals -- "This is the most complete team we have faced," said Arne Slot, whose Liverpool team lost to PSG in the last 16 in March.

The Parisian bid to dominate Europe began in 2011, when Qatar

Sports Investments bought a club in dire straits.

Their investment immediately catapulted PSG into the top-10 wealthiest clubs in Europe and the rise has been vertiginous since.

More than two billion euros has been spent on transfers, and by last year, PSG's annual revenue of over 800 million euros had made them the third-richest club in the world according to analysts Deloitte, behind only Real Madrid and Manchester City.

Those two clubs are the last two winners of the Champions League, while PSG's only previous appearance in the final came in 2020, when they lost to Bayern Munich behind closed doors in Lisbon during the Covid pandemic.

PSG's Qatari president Nasser al-Khelaifi had initially said the plan was to win the Champions League within five years of buying the club.

Last season we were also a proper team. I said we were going to improve the side. Players came in and all the stats say we are a better team now."

That did not happen, while signing both Neymar, for a world-record 222 million euros, and Kylian Mbappe in the same summer in 2017 was also not enough to deliver Europe's biggest prize.

Indeed PSG even went backwards after signing Lionel Messi in 2021.

"It is a trophy the club have been waiting a long time for, but it is very difficult to win," insisted Pedro Miguel Pauleta, former PSG striker.

The genesis of their current success goes back to 2023, when the chronically-unfit Neymar and the ageing and unmotivated Messi departed. That was the summer Luis Enrique arrived, replacing Christophe Galtier to become the eighth coach of the Qatar era.

With their all-time record scorer Mbappe spearheading the attack, PSG got to last season's Champions League semi-finals.

By then Mbappe had made it clear he would be leaving, yet Luis Enrique kept insisting his team would be better without the France superstar.

"Last season we were also a proper team. I said we were going to improve the side. Players came in and all the stats say we are a better team now," the Spaniard said last week.

Pacers beat Knicks to move one win shy of finals

Tyrese Haliburton delivered his second career playoff triple double to power Indiana over New York 130-121 on Tuesday, lifting the Pacers one win from the NBA Finals.

Haliburton scored 32 points, passed off 15 assists and grabbed a career-high 12 rebounds while making no turnovers over 38 minutes becoming the first player in NBA playoff history with 30-15-10 and no turnovers.

Indiana, who blew a 20-point lead in a game-three home loss, seized a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven Eastern Conference finals with the home triumph.

"I was just trying to be aggressive, trying to respond," Haliburton said.

"I felt like I let the team down in game three so it was important to come out here and just make plays.

"Guys put me in position to make plays and play my game and man, it's a big win for us."

Game five is set for Thursday in New York's Madison Square Garden.

"I'm excited about it. It's going to be a lot of fun," Haliburton said.

"It's a tough environment to play in. We've got to be ready. Just one more game, take what we can from this and be ready for game five."

The East winner will face either Oklahoma City or Minnesota in the NBA Finals starting June 5.

Haliburton's father was in the arena after a month-long ban following an on-court incident with Milwaukee's Giannis Antetokounmpo earlier in the playoffs.

"Hell yeah. I'm glad pop is in the building," Haliburton said. "It makes it that much more sweet. Had a little bit to do with it."

Haliburton, who also had four steals, made 11-of-23 shots from the floor and 5-of-12 from three-point range.

"We tried giving him different looks," Knicks coach Tom Thibodeau said. [AFP]

Why Africa 100m silver medallist McCoy stopped racing for Liberia

Every athlete's dream is to compete at the Olympics and earn the revered title of an Olympian.

Countries are always proud whenever their participants punch tickets to the Olympic Games, they do all they can to ensure their charges return home with medals to be kept for honours and posterity.

Unfortunately, this was not the case for Africa women's 100m silver medalist Maia McCoy and her 'adopted' country Liberia in the run up to the Paris Olympics.

The relationship between the two became frosty. Liberia and McCoy no longer see eye to eye. But what's the problem?

"I was ranked 33rd in the world in 100m last season and they (Liberia) decided not to take me to Paris (Olympics), I was hurt," high-spirited McCoy narrated at the Jomo Kenyatta International Airport in Nairobi when she jetted in on Tuesday night.

She will be taking part in the women's 100m at the sixth edition of the Absa Kip Keino Classic set for Ulinzi Sports Complex in Nairobi on Saturday.

The 28-year-old American strained relationship with Liberia commenced last season in Douala, Cameroon in the height of the African Championship where she clinched silver in 100m and anchored Liberia to bronze in the 4x100 m relay.

Having nothing to do after completing her task in Douala, McCoy says she requested the Liberian officials to allow her go back home (to USA) to rest and that's where hell broke loose.

"They got mad about that. They had a problem with that. They felt I was uncomfortable in Africa," she said.

"They felt I was negative influence on the team. So they didn't take me to Paris, they don't want me to represent them any more.

"And yes, the feeling is mutual because it didn't feel the same not running, because that's my identity and at the end of the day it just didn't feel right anyway. I'll be so happy to get fully switched back to the USA," she said.

Granted another opportunity, McCoy firmly stated she would not represent Liberia again in any championship after the horrendous ordeal.

"No. No. Never again," she said. "I have switched over. I'm happy in the country of my birth. I don't want to be rude but they don't want me to represent them any more and I don't want to represent them too. So the feeling is mutual. I'm excited to switch back to the USA," she said.

But the double African Games silver medalist claims the break up with Liberia has not affected her athletics prowess in any way and that she is rearing to blaze in her maiden appearance at the Kip Keino Classic on Saturday.

"Hopefully, you see gold on Saturday. The target at Ulinzi is gold, no less. I'm out to win," she declared. [Ochieng Oyugi]

► The American won bronze last year and she is keen to upgrade to gold on Saturday.

► Bianca is glad to return to Kenya where she says the crowd she met last year at the stadium was the best.

OCHIENG OYUGI, NAIROBI

America's women's 400m hurdler Bianca Stubler is hopeful to upgrade last year's bronze to gold in the sixth edition of the Absa Kip Keino Classic Continental Tour Gold meet due to go down at the Ulinzi Sports Complex in Nairobi on Saturday.

She will face well known rivals, including race defending champion Amalie Iuel of Norway.

Elisabeth Slettum, also of Norway, will also be in the mix to improve on her seventh place finish last season.

Others foraging for glory in the energy sapping sprinting challenge include Jessica Wright (USA), Kristiina Halonen (Finland) and Eileen Demes (Germany).

"It will be my second time in the Kip Keino Classic and I can only promise one thing, to strike gold. That's my aim. "I have perused the line up and most of those in the competing are well known to me. I have run a lot against some of those in the line up. I know them well. I already have my calculations on how to floor the field," the 25-year-old said.

"Most of the opponents I met at the weekend at the Croatia Continental Gold Meet and it's not surprising that we are going to compete together here in Nairobi this weekend.

"We have run together a couple of times and also here last year, so I'll be looking to compete hard, race for the win," she said.

Asked what lessons she learnt in her debut at the Kip Keino Classic last year, the Loyola University Chicago sprints assistant coach said: "It was a little bit wild. I had an amazing experience here. The crowd at the stadium was the craziest I have ever been to. The championship was awesome. I did pretty well, but now I'm I'm always honoured to compete with the best in the world like Sydney McLaughlin, it's an honour to come from the US where everyone is really good and deep, so being able to compete against them multiple times in the year is such an accolade."

Bianca Stubler, American hurdler looking forward to doing even better. I'm looking forward to competing at that high octane level in this awesome place. It's all about getting the athletics experience everyday."

Stubler admits she is inspired into the race by her compatriot and world record holder Sydney McLaughlin who has so far broken six world records in the category, with the current best at 50.37 seconds.

"Sydney is someone on her own levels and I look up to her for inspiration. We are all on our own journeys. I admire what she does. I'm still young and have belief in my capabilities to rise someday.

"I'm always honoured to compete with the best in the world like Sydney, it's an honour to come from the US where everyone is really good and deep, so being able to compete against them multiple times in the year is such an accolade.

"I intend to continue getting that experience and exposure before the world stage," Stubler said.

After Kip Keino Classic, Stubler will proceed for other meets in Italy and Jamaica. She is hopeful to book a berth for the Worlds in Tokyo in September as well as the LA 2028 Olympics which her country will be hosting.

"The dream is always the Olympics. I won't stop until I get there. I will be over the moon if I get that gold," she said.

Stubler said she has also decided to venture into coaching at the Loyola University Chicago despite her tender age in order to give back to the society.

Does Harambee Stars still need Wanyama?

- Kenya will play Chad in upcoming international friendlies in June.
- Wanyama's return to the national team has generated mixed reactions.

WASHINGTON ONYANGO, KISUMU

The return of former Harambee Stars captain Victor Wanyama to the national team has elicited mixed reactions across Kenya's football landscape.

Stars coach Benni McCarthy confirmed the veteran midfielder's inclusion in the squad for the upcoming international friendlies against Chad scheduled for June 7 and June 10 in Morocco, marking Wanyama's return to the team after nearly four years in international retirement.

Wanyama last featured for the Stars during a 2022 Africa Cup of Nations qualifier against Comoros on November 15, 2020.

A year later, he announced his retirement from international duty on September 27, 2021, following a fallout with the then-coach Jacob 'Ghost' Mulee, who stripped him of the captaincy in favour of striker Michael Olunga.

McCarthy's decision to recall the Dunfermline Athletic midfielder has generated divided opinion, with some football stakeholders hailing the move as timely and strategic, while others believe it undermines the progress of emerging talents in the country.

Former Kisumu Posta striker and ex-Harambee Stars forward Elijah Onsika is among those who saw the move as a non-beneficial factor in the rebuilding process.

Onsika, a CAF coaching instructor, questioned the logic behind bringing Wanyama back into the fold, stating that there are a number of young talents within the local leagues deserving international exposure.

"Benni McCarthy has a large pool of young players who can play better," Onsika told the Standard. "It is time for the old players to give way. They have had their time, and unfortunately, we have nothing major to show for it. Kenya should be building a team for the future, not looking backwards."

For Onsika, a good dancer knows when to leave the stage.

His sentiments are much alike with many fans online.

A user identified as Manyasi posted on X (formerly twitter): "Myles Lewis-Skelly got his first call-up at 18 years. Aldrine Kibet is hitting 22 and still no first team call-up. Instead, Wanyama is back, baby. Benni McCarthy ain't him."

Another fan, Fred Engosia, chimed in: "Young players should be given a chance. Look at serious teams like Spain."

However, not all are against Wanyama's return. Former Gor Mahia head coach and football coach instructor Bob Oyugi called for patience and support for the new technical bench.

"Wanyama brings experience and leadership to the team. Tactically, nobody knows why McCarthy needs him, but the coach must be given the space to create his own system and build chemistry," said Oyugi.

According to Oyugi, his influence in training, professionalism, and guidance to young midfielders could be the spark that ignites a new era.

"You cannot build a house by throwing away all the old bricks. With the 2026 World Cup qualifiers on the horizon, having a seasoned leader like Wanyama in camp might offer more than just minutes on the pitch," said the 1993 Premier League champion with Gor Mahia.

Agoro Sare High School coach Jerry Opondo, who led Ambira High School to win the Siaya County football title last year and now hopes to replicate that success in Homa Bay and Nyanza, echoed Oyugi's sentiments.

"Despite the rise of young talent, Wanyama remains a proven leader. His presence alone can elevate the mood of the camp. Many players will learn from him," Opondo stated.

"Stars are rebuilding, and leadership will be key. Critics should allow McCarthy to implement his vision."

The squad features a balanced mix of seasoned campaigners and exciting new talent, as McCarthy continues to shape his team.

Among the notable inclusions are Kenneth Nyamwaya and Swaleh Pamba, both earning their maiden call-ups to the senior national team.

This marks McCarthy's second camp with the Harambee Stars, and the upcoming friendlies will offer a key opportunity to assess the squad's depth and readiness as Kenya builds toward the 2024 African Nations Championship (CHAN) in August.
